Police Hunt Auto in Baggett Disappearance

ALL DAY SEARCH OF RIVER FAILS TO REVEAL BODY

MURDERED FOR MONEY RELATIVES BELIEVE

Officers Advance Theory He May Have Been Killed and Body Spirited Off in an Automobile.

Expert divers and volunteers continued the search Sunday for the body of P. R. Baggett, Douglasville farmer, who, it is believed, was murdered near the Chattahoochee river, at Mayson and Turner bridge, early Friday night. No trace of the body nor any other evidence which might shed light on his mysterious disappearance was found during the search.

Belief was expressed Sunday night that Baggett had been murdered and his body taken in an automobile to some point in order to hide evidence of the crime. Persons living in the vicinity of Mayson-Turner bridge told relatives of Baggett that a big roadster in which two men were riding was seen near the bridge about 7 o'clock Friday night, about the hour it is thought Baggett was murdered. It was stated that the car drove at a terrific rate of speed toward Atlanta when it left the bridge. A description of the car has been furnished officials and the clue will be followed.

Sold Produce Here.

Baggett, a brother of the sheriff of Douglas county, is about 40 years of age, married, and has several children. He operates a truck farm and made daily trips to Atlanta with his produce. When he did not return to his home Friday night it occasioned very little interest because he often remained overnight in Atlanta with his brother, an employee of Beck & Gregg Hardware company. Sheriff Baggett stated that when the missing brother did not sell all of his produce during the day, he remained over and disposed of it the next day. Late Saturday when he did not return home his family and friends grew anxious and began making inquiry. When his absence become known several Douglasville citizens who had made the trip to Atlanta Friday night or Saturday recalled having seen a truck standing near the north abutment of Mayson-Turner bridge. Investigation developed the fact that the truck belonged to Baggett and the missing man was last seen repairing a puncture about 6:30 o'clock Friday night. No one has been found who has seen him since that time.

Further investigation revealed that Baggett had purchased a box of tire patches at a store near the bridge and had returned to repair a tire which he told the storekeeper had been punctured.

Crumpled Hat Found.

Baggett's hat, slightly crumpled, was found a few feet from where he had evidently been repairing the tire.

ONE MOVIE PEST WILL PAY FINE FOR HIS LESSON

He was in fine form Saturday, as he sat in a movie and read each title aloud as it was flashed on the screen loudly and sonorously.

When nearby members of the audience objected, Harry thought they were churlish fellows who knew little of elocution, and kept right on.

Harry did not see light until Magistrate Fitzgerald fined him $13.50 and admonished him about theater etiquette.

KLAN PARADE IS MARCHED TO JAIL BY CITY OFFICERS

244 Alleged Klansmen Arrested on Charge of Obstructing Traffic in Ohio Town.

Portsmouth, Ohio, October 28.—The edict of Mayor William N. Gableman against the Ku Klux Klan was enforced here this afternoon when police stopped a parade of alleged klansmen and arrested 244 of the paraders.

The paraders assembled in a local park and were marching to a church where they were to take part in the laying of a cornerstone when Chief of Police Joseph Distel with a squad of patrolmen placed them under arrest and marched the entire procession to the police station. They were charged with having obstructed traffic and ordered to report for hearing in municipal court tomorrow. Most of the marchers were residents of nearby towns and villages.

While a crowd estimated at 10,000 gathered about the police station some one set up a burning cross on adjoining school property.

Klan leaders had been denied permission yesterday to parade in regalia, according to Mayor Gableman, and fifty special police were sworn in.

Two youths, one of whom told police he was a member of the klan, were arrested tonight after police say they burned a fiery cross in the heart of the business district. Later they were released to appear later in juvenile court.

There was no sign of further disorders here late tonight.

JAMES R. MELL DIES ON SUNDAY

Pioneer, Who Saw Atlanta Burned in Sixties, Had Been in Bad Health Several Years.

James Robert Mell, widely known real estate man and pioneer citizen of Atlanta, died Sunday afternoon at his residence, 803 Peachtree street, after an extended illness. While his health had been impaired for several years, not until two weeks ago was his condition considered critical.

Born in Atlanta on October 26, 1856, Mr. Mell celebrated his 67th birthday last Friday. He was 10 years of age when Atlanta was the scene of conflict during the civil war, and watched the city's destruction by Sherman's forces.

After the war he spent his early years as a retail, and later as a wholesale merchant here. In 1891 he entered the real estate business, his firm, the J. R. Mell Realty company, being located in the Kimball house.

When a young man Mr. Mell was president of the Union Square Land company and it was due principally to his efforts while serving in that capacity that the street car lines were extended to Decatur.

Mr. Mell's ancestors came to this country from England in the year 1650 and owned large plantations in South Carolina and Georgia. They were among the founders of the famous Old Midway church located in Liberty county, Georgia.

In 1887 Mr. Mell was married to Miss Lula Brooks, daughter of the late Edward Woodford and Eliza Ralston Brooks, prominent early Atlantans. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Miss Lida Ralston Mell, and two sons, Brooks Mell, of Atlanta, and Robert E. Mell, of Rock Hill, S. C.

Mr. Mell had been a factor in the benevolent and religious life of Atlanta. He was a member of the Central Congregational church. Funeral services will be announced later.

PINCHOT DEMANDS THAT MELLON CUT DOWN ON PERMITS

Governor Requests Treasury Head To Dam Booze Flood From Warehouses.

SEVERAL BREWERIES NAMED IN LETTER

Also Wants To Use State Police as Inspectors in Alcohol Plants To Check Uses.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 28.—Governor Pinchot in a letter tonight to Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, placed the blame for what he termed the "break down" of federal prohibition enforcement in Pennsylvania upon the federal permit system. He declared Mr. Mellon, as secretary of the treasury, has the power, by control of these permits, to make violations "substantially impossible."

"The people of the state," the governor asserted, "are being affronted by open defiance of the law," which he said is mainly due to the quantities of liquor turned loose from plants operating under federal permits over which the state has no control.

"You, as secretary of the treasury," Mr. Pinchot's letter said, "have the power to cut this flood off at the source by revoking these permits and by refusing to issue others except upon conditions sufficient, with honest enforcement, to make violations substantially impossible. I, as governor of Pennsylvania, have no such power."

Pointing to President Coolidge's request and promise of co-operation at the conference of governors in Washington, October 20, he asked Mr. Mellon two questions relating to federal co-operation: whether in all federal permits hereafter issued in Pennsylvania, the secretary will require as a condition that state police shall have access at any time to any plant holding a federal permit and whether the secretary will cancel the permits of plants making and using alcohol, including breweries, upon proof of violations submitted by state officers.

The governor listed the names of several breweries in Pennsylvania which he said violated the law prior to 1923 and which were granted permits to operate this year and of others whose federal permits he said have not been canceled although they were caught this year by the state police.

ATLANTAN IS KILLED

C. G. Turner Dies in Birmingham Explosion.

Explosion of a gas tank in the plant of the Stockholm Pipe company, of Birmingham, resulted in the instant death Sunday afternoon of Cornelius G. Turner, former Atlantan, who had been employed by the company during the last five months, according to information received here by his widow, who resides at 588 Woodward avenue, and brother, T. S. Turner, of Central fire station.

Details of the tragedy were lacking. T. S. Turner, brother of the deceased, left Atlanta Sunday night for Birmingham and will escort the body back here Monday.

Mr. Turner is survived by his widow, four daughters, Misses Beatrice, Dean, Frances and Rachael Turner; three brothers, J. R. Turner, of Erie, Okla., C. R. Turner, of Princeton, Tex., and T. S. Turner, of Atlanta; and two sisters, Mrs J. M. Brooks and Mrs. J. L. Nibett, both of Birmingham.

Poincare Details Position of France On German Survey

Premier Makes It Plain That Commission On Reparations Created by Versailles Treaty Is Only Agency Paris Will Recognize.

FINDINGS OF EXPERTS NOT TO BE BINDING

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paris, October 28.—An official communique written by Premier Poincare and issued at the French foreign office this evening reiterates the French government's determination to refuse to agree to any reduction of the German debt as fixed by the London conference in May, 1921.

The communique insists that a committee of experts, organized within the scope of the reparation commission to investigate Germany's capacity for payment, has no authority to make any reduction in Germany's debt. It says it considers such a committee will be practically a mere addition to the present staff of experts of the reparation commission.

Quotes Treaty.

Quoting the Versailles treaty, the communique says the reparation commission itself has no power to grant any reduction in reparations as the treaty stipulates such a measure must be decided by the unanimous vote of the nations interested.

The text of the communique follows:

"The French government in its reply to the British government concerning the creation of a committee of experts bases its authority upon paragraph 7, annex 2, to part 8 of the treaty of Versailles, permitting the constitution of such committees.

Gives Commission Power.

"This paragraph empowers the commission to nominate all functionaries, agents and employees necessary to the execution of its functions, to create committees, the members of which are not necessarily chosen from the commissioh, and to give such functionaries, agents and committees full powers and authority.

"Thus the reparation commission, acting within the limits of its powers, may designate such experts, the help of which appears necessary in order to obtain the information it requires.

"Thus this in no way implicates on the part of the commission any abandonment of its powers, which it retains integrally; the information, advice and recommendation it would receive from such a committee would have no other object than to enlighten it, as in the case of the experts now employed by the commission which has the authority to increase their number."

Can Hear Germany.

"On the other hand, paragraph 9, annex 2 to part 8 of the treaty, permits the commission to hear all arguments and testimonials presented by Germany upon any question relating to the latter's capacity for payment. The above paragraph interprets that part of article 234 in which it is said that the commission must study from time to time the resources of Germany and, after having given the representatives of that conutry equitable facilities to be heard, has full powers to extend the period or modify the methods of payment fixed by article 233.

"Thus Germany, although not represented upon the committee of experts, may be heard by them and present all arguments and evidence, the latter not necessarily from German, but also neutral and allied sources. The experts, or a group of experts, can in no case infringe upon the powers of the commission, which are fixed by article 234, which specifically states that the commission alone can extend delays and modify the mode of payments to be made in conformity with article 233.

Payment Schedule Definite.

"Article 233 itself stipulates that in the event Germany should fail to meet her obligations and payments as scheduled by the commission, all the balance remaining unpaid must be carried forward to payments to be received in following years, according to decisions of the commission. But

Sampigny, France, October 28.—Premier Poincare in a speech here today declared France would refuse to allow the reparation commission to be divested of its functions or replaced by some other body. He said France could not agree to any reduction in the German note.

The premier asserted that he welcomed American representation on a committee charged by the reparation commission to investigate Germany's capacity to pay, but every act of the committee must remain within the terms laid down by the Versailles treaty.

The premier, who delivered a long speech at the unveiling of a monument to the war dead of the village in which his country residence is situated, said:

Job Already Assigned.

"We constantly are being asked to proceed to a fresh estimate of Germany's capacity to pay. What does that mean? If it means by a roundabout way to reach diminution of the German debt, that is a combination we are resolved not to favor.

"If it means an estimate of what Germany can pay tomorrow and in the near future, nothing is more necessary than such an examination.

"The commission on reparations is charged by the treaty with such a task, and there are no grounds to take one of its most important functions from it."

M. Poincare said the commission was above suspicion; it had shown itself competent and impartial; it was obliged to give Germany with each decision a fair opportunity to present her observations.

U. S. Represented.

"It has the good fortune," the premier continued, "to have at each meeting a semi-official representative of the United States, who is a man of the highest sense of justice and absolute integrity."

"Its British, Italian and Belgian delegates are most distinguished men, he said, and its president, none could say lacked intelligence or experience.

"Germany has just resumed contact with the commission," went on M. Poincare, and the reich delegates will undoubtedly soon be heard by it. Let it work and fulfill its mandate."

Having thus stated what he considered the position and value of the reparation commission, M. Poincare took up the "invitation and supplication" addressed to him by Stanley Baldwin, the British prime minister—"a courteous invitation to an international conference or a commission of experts placed under the commission on reparations and a friendly supplication to reflect thrice before refusing these propositions."

Meditates on Answer.

"As Mr. Baldwin's speech dates over thrice twenty-four hours," M. Poincare continued, "I have taken time to meditate it—more than thrice." His first thought, he said, was that there was agreement on the essential point as to the necessity for a settlement of the reparations question and concerted action by the allies to insure payment.

"We also, like Mr. Baldwin," said M. Poincare, "hope that the United States consents not to keep itself completely dissociated from the affairs of Europe. We believe the stronger the economic, financial and moral solidarity is between the old and new continents the better will the cause of humanity be served.

"But what should an international conference discuss? How would it be composed? What relations of collaboration or dependence would it have as regards governments or the commission on reparations? What would be its power?

England Jeers.

"All these problems passed through my mind during the first stage of meditation without my being able to solve them. Much fun has been made in England over my Sunday discours-

UNDERSEAS BOAT RAMS FRUIT SHIP OFF CANAL GATES

DIVERS SEEK BODIES OF DROWNED SAILORS

O-5 Was Built During War But Already Was Obsolete Except for Harbor Defense.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, October 28.—The United States submarine O-5 was sunk in Limon Bay, Canal Zone, after a collision early today with the United Fruit company's vessel Abangarez, the navy department was notified by radio. Five members of the submarine's crew were reported missing.

The Abangarez was undamaged. In the belief that the five men missing went down with the submarine, divers immediately began efforts to recover their bodies.

Those reported missing were: Lawrence Brown, chief electrician's mate, Tyngsboro, Mass.; Clyde E. Hughes, motor machinist's mate first class, Manite, Ills.; Henry Dreault, torpedo man, second class, Grand Isle, Vermont; Thomas T. Melzer, fireman, Philadelphia, and Fred C. Smith, mess attendant, first class, Cristobal, Canal Zone.

Sun Was Up.

The commanding officer of the submarine, according to navy records, was Lieutenant Harrison Avery, of Pennsylvania. Only one other officer was listed as attached to the vessel, Lieutenant A. H. Bamberger. The collision occurred at 6:25 a. m., off Buoy 3 in Limon Bay, which is at the eastern terminus of the Panama Canal.

The official dispatch to the department announcing the accident was the only one received up to a late hour today and in the absence of further details, officials here said they were unable to suggest the cause. The opinion was expressed however, that contributory factors of weather, incorrect course, or inaccurate interpretation of navigation signals would be found.

Bay Perfectly Charted.

At the time of the accident, officers familiar with operations in canal waters said the tropical sun would have been well up and it was improbable that a collision could have occurred in the perfectly charted bay under ordinary conditions. If the O-5 was running submerged or "awash," regulations require that extreme caution be taken in selection of the place of such maneuvers in order that other craft may be avoided.

The O-5, although launched during the war, was one of a class already considered practically obsolete and restricted to coast and harbor defense. Built at the Fore River Shipbuilding company's plant at Quincy, Mass., in 1917, the submarine displaced slightly more than 520 tons and measured 176 feet in length with 18 feet beam. Her motive plant gave 14 knots on the surface and 10.5 submerged. Four torpedo tubes and a 3-inch gun comprised the offensive armament.

The crew, if complete at the time of disaster, would have included three officers, three warrant officers and 24 men.

Bandits Slay Two.

Alton, Ill., October 28.—John Preede, 38, constable of East Alton, and Joseph MaMahon, 26, of St Louis, were shot to death when three masked men attempted to hold up and rob six persons who were playing poker in a room at an East Alton hotel this morning.

SENATOR KELLOGG HAS ROUGH ROAD TO BRITISH POST

Wahington, October 28.—Progressive senators were hostile Saturday to reports that Kellogg would be given the London ambassadorship, provided the British government found him acceptable.

Contrary to the tradition of "once a senator, always a senator," which greases the way for the nominations of ex-senators, the confirmation of Kellogg's appointment it seems likely will be fought tooth and nail by the progressive group led by Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin.

HOPES OF PEACE OF WEARY WORLD DEPEND ON U. S.

William Jennings Bryan Asserts That This Is the Only Country That Can Speak Word Needed.

"The United States is the only country that can speak the word of peace to a war-weary world," said William Jennings Bryan in a lecture delivered at the city auditorium Sunday afternoon. Dealing with various suggestions of Utopia that have been advanced of late to lead the world out of the slough of chaos and hatred, the speaker said that neither education nor armament, but the spirit of Christ was the only hope of salvation for the human race.

As the subject of his lecture, Mr. Bryan had chosen the healing of the blind man at the gates of Jericho. After recounting details of the story, the speaker launched into a scathing denunciation of the intellectual blindness and the spiritual blindness which he said was ruining the country.

"When men pay a million and a half dollars to see a prizefight, to see human bodies pound each other, when they take delight in such things, then there is intellectual blindness in this country. The papers tell us 85,000 people saw that prizefight recently, and 25,000 could not get in, although they tore and scratched and fought," he added.

Spiritual Blindness Worse.

"But spiritual blindness is even worse than intellectual blindness," he contiqued. "A third of the professors in this country do not believe in God. They believe in the mind. They believe in science. But I say that education which is not consecrated by love is the worst thing we have in this country.

"Intellectual leaders are overestimating reason and underestimating the heart and will. Great lawyers sell their brains and their intellect for money. Look at the fight for prohibition. It took fifty years to bring it about. And then, when it finally had passed through the house and through the senate and an enforcement law was passed, then the matter was submitted to the supreme court of the United States. And these men, these able, intellectual lawyers, tried to destroy a bulwark erected to safeguard the souls of a nation," Mr. Bryan continued.

"Burglars are getting $65,000,000 a year in the United States. I read re-

BAVARIA, SAXONY REJECT DEMANDS OF STRESEMANN

Monarchist Province Defies Berlin and Will Retain Von Lossou as Military Head.

PROLETARIAN REVOLT IS MENACE IN SAXONY

Challenge to Berlin by Two States May Bring Bloodshed or More Ultimatums.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Berlin, October 28.—Immediately on receipt of Dr. Zeigner's reply refusing to comply with the central government's ultimatum, Chancellor Streseman announced that the government would appoint a civil governor for Saxony. He will be empowered to administer Saxony's civil affairs until the present communist-socialist ministry is replaced by a parliamentary government acceptable to the federal authorities.

The central government has lost no time in countering Dr. Zeigner's reply, and a rupture with the Dresden ministry is inevitable, as the present Saxon diet would in all probability be returned with Premier Zeigner and his associates to office.

Several prominent socialist leaders of Berlin went to Dresden this morning to patch up a truce, but they did not succeed in halting the break between Berlin and Dresden.

BY FERDINAND JAHN.

Berlin, October 28.—Both communist Saxony and monarchist Bavaria have defied the ultimatums of the federal government.

The Saxon cabinet Sunday refused the Berlin demand that it resign, saying there was no political reason why it should quit office. The cabinet declared the federal government had exceeded its authority in ordering the resignation, and decided to ask the Saxon diet for a vote of confidence.

Berlin had threatened to take over the Saxon administration unless communists were eliminated from the cabinet by Monday.

Bavaria has defied Berlin's ultimatum to dismiss General von Lossow and restore federal authority over military in the rebel state.

Will Keep Von Lossow.

In a Sunday session the Bavarian folks party, which is the government party of the state, made it plain that Bavaria does not intend, temporarily at least, to drop von Lossow. Dr. Held, party leader, declared that they could not meet the federal demand, and furthermore would support Dictator von Kahr and ex-Premier Knilling.

The chancellor's double-barreled ultimatum is a desperate attempt to whip recalcitrant states back into line with the reich. The situation has obviously reached a pass where drastic measures are needed. Bavaria's revolt has been open. Kidnaping a federal army, defying Berlin, breaking off relations with the federal state, Munich has calmly gone its own way, tending to more reactionary sentiment and less respect for the authority of Berlin.

Menace of Soviet.

Against this picture of monarchial enthusiasm the Saxon turmoil offers a new political rebellion, tinged with the menace of actual proletarian revolt. Attacks have been made on federal troops, the question of the "red hundreds" has not been settled satisfactorily, and new disorders are occuring.

But the two ultimatums have awakened negative reaction here, many fearing they must result in bloodshed. They may dissolve, as have other threats, and take place among the "sham ultimatums" which have featured recent weeks. The government's threat to take over the government of Saxony unless the communists are ousted, carries the suggestion of force, however.

This dissatisfies a large group, which claims that Berlin has consistently yielded to monarchist Bavaria, but sternly repressed Saxon activities.

MRS. JUSTICE DEAD

Mother of Eleven Children Suddenly Passes.

Toombs Cotton Better.

Lyons, Ga., October 28.—(Special.) "Indications are now that the final cotton ginning report will be beyond the 5,000 mark in this county," prominent ginners said Saturday. The crop will be smaller than last year's crop, but very near the same as the 1921 crop from present indications. That fact, together with the higher price, will make the crop for 1923 bring nearly as much money as the 1922 crop sold for."

Income and Profit Taxes Decrease Over $1,250,000,000

Washington, October 28.—The treasury collected income and profits taxes from 7,018,573 individuals and firms for the calendar year 1921, receipts from this source totaling $1,420,962,438.

A statistical report made public today by the bureau of internal revenue shows that such revenue decreased approximately $1,250,000,000 from 1920, while there was a reduction of about 600 in the number of persons and firms making returns.

Of the total number of returns filed, 6,662,176 were by individuals.

Reductions in the amount of taxes paid and the number of returns filed, as compared with 1920, extend all along the line from the persons paying taxes on income of $1,000 to the maximum class of $1,000,000 or more. There were only 21 in the latter class in 1921, while in 1920, the records show, 33 persons admitted having incomes in the class of "one million dollars and over."

Detailed figures disclosed that 12 of the 21 paid taxes on incomes between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000, and none reported incomes between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Three individuals paid taxes on net incomes between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, and five on incomes between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, while one shared with the government an income "in excess of $5,000,000."

The total number of individual taxpayers for 1921 was divided by the bureau's records into the following tax classes:

Incomes of $1,000 to $2,000, 2,140,544; $2,000 to $3,000, 2,222,031; $3,000 to $4,000, 702,991; $4,000 to $5,000, 369,155; $5,000 to $10,000, 353,247; $10,000 to $15,000, 80,014; $15,000 to $20,000, 34,230; $20,000 to $25,000, 18,100; $25,000 to $30,000, 10,848; $30,000 to $40,000, 12,047; $40,000 to $50,000, 6,051; $50,000 to $100,000, 8,717; $100,000 to $150,000, 1,367; $150,000 to $200,000, 450; $200,000 to $250,000, 265; $250,000 to $300,000, 84; $300,000 to $400,000, 98; $400,000 to $500,000, 64; $500,000 to $1,000,000, 63; $1,000,000 and over, 21. Total of 401,849 persons filed returns on income of less than $1,000.

The net income upon which the 6,662,176 individuals paid taxes was recorded by the bureau as $19,577,212,528, while for 1920 the net income was reported at nearly $24,000,000,000. Corporation income for 1921 aggregated $4,336,047,813, a decrease from the preceding year of about $3,600,000,000. Personal and corporation exemptions saved thousands of individuals and several score corporations from tax payments, but the figures were not segregated.

New York and Pennsylvania ranked first and second, respectively, in the list of returns filed, both by individuals and corporations, and held the same respective standing in taxes paid.

Aristocracy of Savannah

:: COLONIAL DUELS BARED IN NEW BOOK ::

Figured in Affairs of Honor

Savannah, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—A marvelous record is contained in a book to be forthcoming this month by a Savannah man, Thomas Gamble, who has written much historical matter about Savannah and the early Georgia colony, on "Savannah Duels and Duellists, 1733-1877." It requires 325 pages to set down the record of the affairs of honor which occurred in Georgia in the century and a half in which the code was in vogue. The first fatal duel is recorded—and the last, though it it is said that the last duel in which neither party was seriously hurt was not mentioned for the reason that one of the participants is still living and prominent and the other, also prominent, recently passed away—both having been anxious that their early affair should be forever forgotten.

Some of the unusual things which the forthcoming locally interesting book will show are paragraphed in questions:

"Do you know that—

"Oglethorpe sanctioned and endorsed dueling as a right to defend and protect one's honor?

"Patriotism could not restrain passions and ambitions from leading Georgia revolutionary figures of prominence into fighting duels?

"George Washington sustained Nathaniel Greene in declining a challenge from a Savannah citizen?

"Out of General 'Mad' Anthony Wayne's election as Savannah's second representative in congress grew a duel between James Jackson and a former mayor of Savannah?

"The mutual hatred of Savannah federalists and republicans frequently led to duels?

"The old Savannah military companies were intensely politically partisan in their memberships?

"A Savannah mayor killed a political opponent soon after leaving the mayoralty chair?

"Two Savannahans who were each afterward governors of Georgia each killed a political enemy in a duel?

"Another Savannahan, afterward governor of the state, whipped a prominent editor in the streets?

"A former Savannahan was considered for secretary of state under Washington?

"A former Savannahan was Alexander Hamilton's second in his duel with Aaron Burr?

"Savannah republicans thought none the less of Burr for slaying Hamilton in a fair duel?

"One of John Paul Jones' lieutenants fought a duel over the Bon Homme Richard-Serapis encounter and lies which had been hurled in the old Colonial cemetery, and that his son was killed in a duel by another Savannahan?

"Mayor Bullock issued a proclamation urging citizens to keep the peace and not further mob an 'obnoxious' local editor?

"An ex-mayor of Savannah was sued for 'posting' a man who had declined a duel and mulcted $5,000 by the verdict of the jury?

"A Savannah man was first to have his appointment to federal office turned down by the United States senate?

"Savannahans 'pillorled' each other in the newspapers—as well as 'posting' them at the vendue house or courthouse—as 'liars,' 'cowards,' 'assassins of character,' etc., and then went forth to fight duels—and sometimes did not?

"The old Jewish burying ground in Savannah was a favorite place for a duel by local men who did not cross over in Carolina to settle their disputes by the code duel, and that Carolinians came by boat to Tybee for such meetings?

"That Poet Wilde's brother was slain at Savannah by one whom he had befriended?

"William Dean Howells, visitor here for several winters before his recent death, wrote at length about the tombstone over Wilde's grave?

"Duels were frequently fought at Old Fort Wayne, where the Savannah gas works is now situated?

"The two Tattnalls defended their honor in hostile meetings?

"Tefft, founder of the Georgia Historical society, thrashed a Savannahan in a dispute over a Chatham artillery election and declined his challenge?

"A Savannahan acted as the second for John Randolph, of Roanoke, in his famous duel with Henry Clay?

"Duelling became so common that leading Savannahans formed an organization to oppose the custom.

"Macready, the great tragedian, took a Savannah duel as his subject matter for a story he wrote here?

"One Savannahan challenged five men to fight him in succession?

"Within one week two young Savannahans were shot through the heart with rifle bullets fired in duels?

"Screven Ferry, S. C., was a favorite dueling ground for Savannahans for more than seventy years?

The book declares that duelling came to Georgia with its first settlers, was an accepted element of the social code, and that the colony was but an infant. The first fatal duel occurred when Peter Grant, one of the earliest settlers and a freeholder, had the "honor" to be the first citizen in Georgia to sacrifice his life in a duel. Old records of the courts and the old newspaper files of Savannah and Charleston have been combed for the accurate and interesting data on which the long recital of hundreds of personal engagements of honor with weapons has been based—down to the last "fatal" duel in which in 1870, Ludlow Cohen fell pierced by a bullet from the pistol of Richardson F. ("Dick") Aiken—Aiken being over sixth and Cohen in his thirties, the two having had a contest with their sail boats, racers of quality in those days, near Isle of Hope—and afterward disagreed so seriously that only the duel was left to adjudicate the differences.

The volume is to be the first of a series by Mr. Gamble, the next will deal with "Early Life in Savannah."

Davis Highway To Be Boulevard Of South Soon

Fitzgerald, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—The route along which the Jefferson Davis highway motorcade will pass Tuesday, on the way to Savannah to participate in the highway motorcade and pageant Wednesday, will shortly become the boulevard of the south, it was declared here today by Isidor Gelders, editor of The Fitzgerald Leader and secretary of the highway association, on his return from the Georgia U. D. C. convention in Augusta last week, where he reported progress being made on the highway.

Plans were perfected at the convention, Mr. Gelders said, for raising memorials to the Confederacy and its chieftain at every point of interest along the route of his historic retreat from Richmond after the fall of the Confederate States. The highway follows generally the line of the retreat.

Near Wrens, where Jefferson Davis secured a fresh horse and escaped from federal cavalry who were galloping close on his heels, a memorial will be erected. The place where he camped on the Ocmulgee river, near Abbeville, the night before his capture will be made into a small park. The place near Irwinville where he was finally captured is to be converted into a park by the Irwin county chapter of U. D. C. A model tourist camp is to be built by the city of Dublin on the highway near where Davis and his party passed on the retreat.

The state highway department of Alabama is to build a memorial concrete bridge across the Chattahoochee river between Eufaula, Ala., and Georgetown, Ga. This point is beyond the point of the Confederate president's capture, but is on the route of the highway which will traverse the south all the way from Richmond, Va., to California.

Members of the Georgia U. D. C. organized during the Augusta convention a Jefferson Davis Highway Memorial society, headed by Mrs. P. H. Jeter, of Decatur, chairman for Georgia of the highway committee of the U. D. C., and Mrs. H. M. Warren, of Fitzgerald. This association will assist local chapters of the U. D. C. in each county along the route to plant pecan trees at each mile post.

The formal opening of the Savannah division of the highway from Fitzgerald to Savannah will occur in Savannah Wednesday, Jefferson Davis Highway day at the Tri-State fair. About 200 automobiles from towns and cities along the route of the Savannah and Richmond divisions will participate in a parade and pageant which will be reviewed by Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, and Governor McLeod, of South Carolina. Governor Walker will accept the highway for the state from the queen of the pageant, Miss Helen Gertrude Davis, of Jacksonville, grandniece of the Confederate president, is directing the pageant.

NEGRO PYTHIANS HOLD RALLY IN EDGEWOOD

A large number of local members of negro Knights of Pythias lodge No. 250 assembled at Edgewood Sunday afternoon, where a program including several prominent speakers was rendered. W. H. Flemister was master of ceremonies. R. B. Williams read several poems, among them being the favorites of the late President Harding. A brass band furnished music, which included "The Star-Spangled Banner" and other patriotic numbers.

SPEEDERS SLAY TOWN MARSHAL

Knoxville, Tenn., October 28.—Marshall Dean Biggs, of Oliver Springs, about 20 miles west of here, was shot three times and instantly killed early tonight by a party of three men speeding through the main street of town in a big red touring car. Anderson and Knox county officers and a posse of infuriated citizens from Oliver Springs are guarding or patrolling every avenue of escape in an effort to apprehend the party.

The men in the car were said to have been intoxicated and driving recklessly through the streets of the town. Marshal Biggs stepped out into the street and attempted to stop them. One of the men drew a pistol and fired three shots, one striking the marshal in the nose, another in the mouth and the third passing through his neck.

Three of the men were said to have been identified by witnesses. The local radio station is broadcasting descriptions of the men and the car. As the men were said to have been heavily armed and intoxicated the officers are anticipating trouble when they are apprehended.

REPORTS SHOW TOOMBS FAIR MAKES MONEY

Lyons, Ga., October 28.—(Special.) Final figures compiled on the results of the Toombs county fair which was held the second week in October, show that in spite of a much heavier premium list than last year the fair has actually made a profit which will be directed towards making a better fair for next year.

"It is a good record for a fair to make a profit two years in succession during two of the tightest years we have had. The fair was by far the best ever held here with agricultural and community exhibits that would have done credit to any fair in the state," fair association members said.

FORD-FOR-PREXY BOOMERS AT SEA ON HERO'S STAND

Detroit, October 28.—Henry Ford has puzzled his most intimate supporters as to his attitude toward the next presidential campaign.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Dearborn Ford-for-President club broke up in an uproar after an attempt had been made by members to repudiate the national Ford conference called for December 12.

Ford's declaration that he would support President Coolidge if the latter enforces prohibition was interpreted by many to mean his retirement from the race.

Despite secrecy pledged by the committee, it was learned that Ford's alleged own words to his brother, disapproving the conference, were heatedly cited.

Although no motion approving the conference was adopted of the several offered, most members advocated supporting the automobile manufacturer until he enunciates a final "no" to nomination talk.

cently, and pickpockets so much, and safeblowers so much, but the greatest amount is obtained by the swindlers. Those are the men that are educated. This is what education does for them. They get away with two billion dollars a year in this land.

Subjected to Science.

"Then there are men who only believe in science. When you tell them 'I believe in God,' they answer, 'Have you taken that to science?' Everything must be subjected to science. The Bible must be checked up each Saturday night to see if there is any discrepancy with science.

"Now this science of the world had reached its zenith of development at the time of the outbreak of the war. There were two groups of scientists before that time, so far I could see. The first group did nothing else but try to discover a projectile that would pierce the thickest armor and the second group was trying to discover an armor that would resist any projectile.

"Who gave the world poison gas that choked your soldiers on the battlefields? Science. Who gave us liquid fire? Science. What was not satisfied with killing people on the land but started to extend its field with submarines and airplanes? Science. That is what science did for us," declared the speaker.

"He Calleth Thee."

"The blind man at the gates of Jericho called out to Christ and Jesus heard him. The Lord said: 'Call Him.' But the blind man did not hear Jesus say this. Those around the Master heard him say it. So they carried the message to the blind man and said: "He Calleth Thee."

"That is the great mission of Christians in our day. To tell others that He is calling them. The blind man knew he was blind. That is a great advantage. But there are people in our day who are intellectually and spiritually blind and they do not know it.

"They would rob Jesus of his virgin birth. They would rob Christ of his glory. But the crucified Christ is still the greatest factor in our modern life. When he was nailed to the tree that seemed the end. But it was in reality the beginning. For from the moment the power of Caesar waned and the glory of the carpenter increased. And finally the whole earth is filled with His name.

"If there was not another phrase in the Bible to prove the deity of Christ than one which occurs in the parable of the sower, that would be sufficient. That phrase did not come from a mere boy who was reared in the carpenter shop in Nazareth. It was divine wisdom. Through the ages its truth had been felt but it never had been put into words in one short phrase. That phrase is this. 'And some of the seed fell by the roadside and the weeds and grass choked it.' Which was interpreted to mean by the Savior that the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the truth," Mr. Bryan said.

Draws Comparison.

"Compare Jesus with other great figures. Compare him with the great men of our day. Less than six years ago five men sat around a table in Paris to draw up the peace treaty. It was the most momentous task that ever fell on the shoulders of men. They represented the greatest nations in the world. And today not one of these men is the dominant character in the nation he represented. But the figure of the Crucified One grows in greatness and significance.

"It has been suggested that commerce would bring peace in the world. People would be so busy trading with each other that they would forget to go to war.

"But commerce also was at its highest point when the war broke out. Others have said education will do away with war. But science had reached the height of its glory just at the time when the war broke out. And recently I read that a man suggested that we should have international horse racing to bring peace in the world.

"The world needs the Great Physician more than any other time in its history. He alone can bring peace. That great Welshman the other day paid our country a great compliment by saying: 'Your country alone in this troubled world can speak the word of peace to a war-weary world. And I think the finest answer that could be given Mr. Lloyd George was the note sent him by the secretary of state telling him that the United States would be represented at the next reparations conference," Mr. Bryan told his audience amidst applause.

"And then Great Britain answered again by agreeing to extend her three-mile limit to nine miles," he said, and received another outburst from the big crowd that packed the auditorium.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

The next hundred million

On the Southern Railway System in the past ten years we have invested more than $100,000,000 in the enlargement of our facilities to provide for the growth of traffic over our 8,300 miles of lines.

The remarkable industrial growth of the South has made necessary every dollar of this expenditure.

But the South is going to keep on growing. More railroad facilities will be demanded. Another $100,000,000 will be needed for tracks and terminals and equipment in the next few years.

How will the next hundred million be provided?

With the continued cooperation of the people of the South, the Southern Railway System will be able not only to save a part of its earnings to provide additional facilities, but also to attract new capital from the investment markets of the world, and thus increase the wealth of the South.

Southern Railway System last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

1 KILLED, 6 HURT AS AUTOS COLLIDE

Swainsboro, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—Olney Brown, 27, of Summit, was instantly killed and four other occupants of the same car were seriously injured, two perhaps fatally, when the automobile which Brown was driving collided with another machine driven by Ottie Lewis, of Swainsboro, about 1 o'clock Sunday morning on the highway about two miles east of Swainsboro. Brown and companions were returning from a party above Swainsboro to Summit when the accident occurred. Brown was said to have been speeding at the time of the collision.

The injured are Izzie Samples, son of Dr. R. L. Samples, who had a fractured skull; May Peebles, who sustained a broken back; Ben Lovins, who suffered a badly sprained back and possibly internal injuries, and Lovins' young sister, who was badly bruised. Mary Lizzie Peebles, sister of May Peebles, escaped unhurt. Ottie Lewis and a man by the name of Lawson, riding with Lewis, were cut and bruised.

When the two cars came together, Brown lost control of his car, which turned completely over because of the rapid rate at which it was traveling, witnesses stated.

The automobile which Brown was driving was almost completely demolished, while Lewis' machine had the left front wheel taken off in the crash.

Olney Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gideon Brown, of Summit. Funeral services were held from the home at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Atlanta Women To Sell Flowers For War Heroes

Direct appeal to Atlanta's vaunted pride is made by disabled veterans of the world war, Gold Star Mothers, War Mothers and many civic organizations for support on "Forget-Me-Not" day.

Saturday, November 3, has been officially set aside to pay tribute to those unfortunate former service men who were disabled during the late world war. Wherever the day is observed patriotic women, mothers of soldiers and civic leaders will urge a proper observance of the day.

Forget-me-not flowers will be offered for sale on the streets. The flowers are sold for whatever a purchaser cares to pay. The proceeds go into the treasury of the disabled veteran's organization to be used in providing necessities of life and in making their unhappy days as bright and cheerful as possible.

Many men are in hospitals, many others should be hospitalized, it is claimed. Several thousand former service men in Georgia are unable to earn a livelihood because of disabilities incurred in the world war. Groups of women and committees of many organizations will sell forget-met-nots Saturday in an effort to secure funds to provide greater assistance for these men.

"Atlanta has an opportunity to show her appreciate of these boys," says Mrs. Samuel D. Jones, one of the leaders in the move this year. "We hope to raise $10,000 this year and we believe the patriotic men and women of Atlanta will respond to the call," she said.

"Blossom Time" Star Noted For Resemblance to Master

With the coming of "Blossom Time" to the Atlanta theater for a week's engagement, beginning Monday night, Atlanta theatergoers are offered the opportunity of seeing and hearing the brilliant young baritone, Greek Evans, whom many critics and believers in the theory of reincarnation have declared to bear a striking resemblance both in features and genius to Franz Schubert, noted master, who died nearly one hundred years ago.

Those who profess belief in reincarnation point to the young star in "Blossom Time" as evidence of the theory that the masterful genius of Schubert has again come to life in Evans and that the features and spirit of the two are almost identical. There are others who, although lacking faith in the theory of incarnation, admit an unusual resemblance between photographs of Schubert and young Evans.

Evans, who sings the role of Schubert in "Blossom Time," will be heard in nightly performances during the week and in matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

GREEK EVANS.

Likeness Discovered.

Greek Evans was engaged almost a year ago to play the role of Schubert and would have undoubtedly created it when it was first produced, but at the time was touring with the Scotti Grand Opera company, of which he was a member, on southern tours.

However, it was not until rehearsals began this summer and the baritone was being fitted with costumes and a wig, that someone in scrutinizing a photograph of the composer, said, "By Jove, Evans, you could have posed for this picture of Schubert himself," and comparing photographs, one could hardly tell which was the composer and which Evans.

"It is a coincidence," Mr. Evans admitted recently in his beautiful speaking voice, quite as beautiful as the glorious singing voice which is enchanting audiences wherever this lively operetta plays, "may be more than a coincidence, for I have to admit myself that from photographs, Schubert and I do seem to look uncannily alike. Although his greatest fame was gained as a composer, he also possessed a very fine baritone voice, in fact, gave singing lessons—probably another coincidence—but that's why I am singing the role—just because I am a baritone, as he was."

Evans Is Modest.

Those who have seen pictures of Schubert claim that Mr. Evans resembles the great composer to an almost unbelievable degree, but Evans refuses to commit himself on the reincarnation theory.

"I don't think Schubert would be particularly flattered," he smiled modestly. "If it be true that somewhere, somehow in the infinity of eternity there is a kinship between us, it is of music, and I only can hope and strive to be worthy of the honor. We to whom a gift has been given, whether great or small, all have a bond whether we live today, two hundred years ago, or five hundred years to come.

Hopes To Be Worthy.

"If in the inexplainable mystery of life, something of the master's earthly appearance has been transmitted to me all I can say is that in my humble way I will endeavor to be worthy of the honor, and not make him ashamed in the beyond of the one who has been entrusted to some degree with his outward semblance, though in no way reflecting his genius.

"There could be only one Schubert but to play him, and sing those best loved melodies which his genius wrote—is indeed a privilege and I am content and happy to do just that."

Mere disinclination to escape the routine of the class room is not the only reason why children play hookey from school, according to Miss Frances Russell, truant officer for the Atlanta system. Sometimes it's lack of shoes. Miss Russell, during the last few weeks, has found more than a dozen children who are remaining at home because they have no shoes and stockings to wear.

Of course rabbit hunting and dove season keep some of the boys away from their lessons—also a desire to visit apple orchards—but usually there are other reasons why children stay away from their classes.

"When school first opened in September," declared Miss Russell, "found a number of children who were playing hookey because they had not been promoted last year and they were ashamed to go back to their old room where they sat with smaller children.

Special Classes Offered.

"I went to their parents and suggested that the boys be sent to the special classes that are being conducted in many of the schools for just such children, enabling them to receive considerably more help in their delinquest studies than in the regular classes. These special casses are doing a wonderful work and there is no reason why children should not make their promotion grades every year now, since theinauguration last year of these classes.

"Some of the boys who were truants before the establishment of these special classes, and who have since been enrolled in them, have entered upon their studies with a new zeal and determination to forge ahead.

"I found another boy who never wanted to go to school. I investigated that case and learned that he chummed around and went to picture shows sometimes. This boy didn't get any money at home so he would stay out of school to work and earn money with which to pay his way into shows. I talked to that boy's father. He said that he was poor and could not give the boy money. He wanted John to go to school and did not see why he had to have money.

Boy Goes to School.

"I suggested that the father give the boy 25 cents a week so he could go to picture shows and occasionally buy an ice cream soda. That father has now put his boy on the weekly allowance and the boy does not stay out of school to get spending money."

Parents are often to blame for their children's truancy, Miss Russell has found. They keep the children out to care for the baby, clean dishes and help with family washing. When the truant officer goes to these homes she finds the parents indifferent. They say they need the children's help.

Girls do not play hookey as much as boys, Miss Russell stated. Little girls seldom stay out of school unless they are kept out by their parents. Older girls stay out to go riding with boys or because they are ashamed to go to school in low grades.

"You've almost got to be a kid yourself to be a truant officer," declared Miss Russell. "Doctors and dentists can help a larger attendance in classes by making appointments with school children after school hours. Business men can aid by not hiring boys or girls during school hours if they are under 15 years of age. Parents can help by seeing that their children of school age are in school every day unless they are too ill to leave their homes. And last, but not least, children can help by reporting to their teachers any child who is in their class and school district who is not attending day classes."

BARACA CLASSES OF FOUR CITIES PLAN ASSOCIATION

Formation of an association of Baraca classes from Baptist churches at College Park, West Point, Newnan and LaGrange, with the purpose of conducting joint meetings every two months at one of the churches included, was proposed at a dinner party Sunday afternoon at the Piedmont hotel, when members of the College Park class acted as hosts to a visiting delegation from West Point.

The object of such an organization would be to further the work of Baraca classes in this section and stimulate interest in Sunday school activity. J. C. Lanier, of West Point, was elected general chairman of the movement, and he immediately appointed a committee to arrange details.

Thirteen members of the West Point Baraca class were honor guests at the dinner, which followed the regular Sunday school program of the Business Men's class at the College Park church.

Members of the party from West Point were: C. W. Sharman, J. C. Lanier, M. B. Brook, W. P. Jackson, J. S. Howell, R. S. Heard, Dr. J. V. Davis, Paul Potts, Lewis Callaway, H. L. Hill, C. F. Nolan, George S. Heard and W. D. Johnson.

Mr. Lanier appointed from the College Park class a committee composed of R. E. Plowden, S. E. Davidson, T. H. Porch, J. M. McDaris and W. H. Jackson to visit the classes of the two Baptist churches of Newnan next Sunday, and a committee composed of R. S. Heard, H. L. Hill, W. P. Jackson, C. F. Nolan and C. W. Sharman, from the West Point class to visit LaGrange also next Sunday to take the matter up with them of perfecting the new organization.

POLICE SEEK AUTO IN BAGGETT MYSTERY

and an iron rod about twelve inches long, which he had been using as a jack handle, also was found. Clots of blood were noticeable on the iron rod and on the ground near the truck, although there were no signs of a struggle. The punctured tube and tire had been taken from the wheel of the truck and placed across the right front fender.

Relatives of Baggett and officials believe that he was struck with the rod and his body either thrown into the river at that point, or taken in a car to some other place and either placed in the river or hidden in some other manner.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive, as Baggett usually carried back to his home from $35 to $50 each night, representing sales from his produce. Sheriff Baggett told a Constitution reporter that so far as he knew his brother did not have "an enemy in the world" who would kill him. "The missing man," his brother said, "never drinks and his financial affairs are in good shape."

Search Is Resumed.

Divers and a large party started the search early Saturday night and the Chattahoochee river for several hundred yards below and above the bridge has been thoroughly dragged. The land on both sides has also been carefully combed, but no trace has been found of Baggett.

The searching party was augmented Sunday by several score volunteers from Atlanta and Douglasville and late Sunday night the search continued unabated.

es; but what daily contradictory and useless discourses would an international conference mean while you, my friends still were waiting for stones and tiles to rebuild your homes?

"If, in truth, the British government is not thinking of asking us to make Germany come and sit at the conference of which it speaks; if it has simply, like ourselves, a desire of obtaining the co-operation of the United States, it is easy for us to reach an understanding on the idea already considered at Paris, as at Washington, Brussels and Rome.

"The commission on reparations is there. It makes investigations; experts make inquiries daily; it can, without the slightest innovation, ask the semi-official delegate of the United States to nominate American experts to examine with the French, English and Belgians the present capacity for payment by Germany, and to demand that the reich draw up a program of financial restoration and a detailed plan of reparations without going outside the treaty.

No More Concessions.

Here the premier seemed to have reached the point he desired to emphasize:

"We cannot," he said, "accept that the commission be dispossessed of its functions or replaced by an organism in which our share of influence, already inferior to our interests, would be still further reduced. We have reached the limit of our concessions. We shall not go farther."

M. Poincare began his speech by pointing out that he, unhappily, had proved himself right in advising caution when "the German government noisily announced the cessation of passive resistance and when he warned France that intrigues and evasions had not yet ended. He then denied France had been instrumental in arousing internal troubles in Germany.

Denies Interference.

"We have always scrupulously remained outside the internal affairs of Germany," declared the premier, "and the allegations of the German government scandalously spread in Europe and the New World, will not obscure the truth from impartial spectators. Whatever Germany's future constitution may be; whatever may be the relations between the states composing it, we shall never think of violating the conscience of the population. We nourish no plan of annexation, but we shall never renounce our claims to permanent guarantees for security."

M. Poincare then dwelt on Germany's war preparations in aviation and other ways, saying France would not sacrifice her rights to reparations any more than her claims to security. He defended the occupation of the Ruhr, saying that without that Germany today would be able to refuse payments and continue to enrich herself through her factories using Ruhr coal, whereas it now was to her interest to pay her creditors at the earliest possible time in order to hasten the evacuation of the Ruhr.

He Quotes Wilson.

"All we ask of our allies," said M. Poincare, "is observation of the treaty they signed, as well as we. The schedule of May 5, 1921, is definite, and it cannot be modified without our consent. The treaty lays down no reduction that can be granted Germany without unanimity on the part of the creditors, and France is too much tried to adhere to a reduction."

The premier ended his discourse with words of gratitude to the allies, recognizing that fraternity of arms and assured success to the French efforts.

"But," he declared, "each of us, struggling for the others, struggled also, and above all for himself. We have given as much as we have received, and we can claim gratitude equal to that we owe our friends. . . . We will no longer remain exposed to fresh aggressions on our eastern frontier, which President Wilson one day very justly called the frontier of liberty."

FRENCH RESERVATIONS WILL NOT KEEP U. S. OUT.

Washington, October 28.—On the face of Premier Poincare's remarks today or the official communique issued by the French foreign office, it does not appear that the limitations France insists must be placed upon the scope of the proposed inquiry by experts into Germany's capacity to pay reparations necessarily impedes participation of American economic authorities in the undertaking. It has been emphasized repeatedly by spokesmen of the Washington government that such a commission ought not to have power to bind any of the governments on any point.

Presumably the allied powers will feel they cannot commit themselves in advance to acceptance of recommendations made by expert advisors to the reparations commission. It has been stated on authority here that the chief hope of success in solving the reparations problem by means of an advisory commission would lie not in the method by which its recommendations were arrived at but in the soundness of its conclusions.

Barrier Not Impassable.

In view of this feeling here, the assertions of the French premier that France could not agree to any reduction of Germany's reparation obligations does not appear to place an impassable barrier in the way of final adoption of the expert commission plan. It is pointed out that if the experts assembled information showing the impossibility of collecting from Germany the sums now charged against her under the Versailles treaty, there would be no point in opposing a revision of the figures. Neither France nor any other government, it is contended, could logically demand impossibilities, and the expert commission plan is advanced as a means of bringing out the facts in such a way that no government can challenge the soundness of the commission's findings.

Harmony Is Object.

In any event, under the French stipulation that the inquiry must be made under authority of the reparations commission, no recommendations from the experts could reach the governments involved, presumably, except through the reparations commission itself. If the commission were convinced of the soundness of recommendations made by the experts and reported accordingly to the governments, the whole question would be removed from the field of controversy, and a start would be made on working out a unified plan of action for the solution of the reparations problems.

The main object of the proposal originally made by Secretary Hughes was to bring the allied governments into harmony once more in dealing with this troublesome situation. Explanations of the French attitude toward the British alternative proposal are viewed with great interest in Washington. Negotiations which it is hoped will lead to adoption of the plan are going on between Paris and London, with the Washington government merely an interested observer at this stage of the proceedings.

POINCARE'S SPEECH ROUSES LONDON.

London, October 28.—M. Poincare's speech at Sampigny today and the semi-official explanations of the French government's attitude which reached London tonight seem to show the intention of that government to circumscribe the proposed investigation into Germany's capacity to pay reparations under the aegis of the reparation commission to the greatest possible extent by taking advantage of every technical clause in the treaty. More particularly the French premier voices the greatest objection to Germany's being represented on the proposed commission of experts, and one Paris paper insinuates that the experts will need to be challenged by France on the ground that they have enormous holdings of German marks and are therefore interested in the rehabilitation of German currency.

It is understood that Premier Baldwin will preside at the cabinet council tomorrow to consider the points raised by M. Poincare today and in his acceptance of Mr. Baldwin's invitation to a conference. Occasion will also be taken to consider further the question of the effect produced on the country by the prime minister's tentative advocacy of protection as a remedy for unemployment.

with this the powers of the commission end. It can agree to no further decrease without special authorization from the various governments represented on the commission.

"Furthermore, according to Article 233, the allied and associated governments may even intervene in the settlement of the yearly balances remaining unpaid, and, although the commission has the authority to carry such balances to following years it cannot cancel such debts, such action being determined by the allied and associated governments.

In Poincare's Handwriting.

"The net results of the interpretations of the above text are that although the commission may determine the methods of payment of German debts, extend the periods and modify the methods of such payments, it cannot make any reduction whatsoever, such reductions only being granted by the unanimity of the creditor nations.

"Thus France will not accept that a committee of experts may make any changes in the amount of the debt as fixed May 1, 1921, and will give its consent to no reduction whatsoever in the amount of the obligations of Germany as determined by the reparations commission in May, 1921."

The above document was written entirely by M. Poincare in his own hand and turned over to the foreign office before his departure for Sampigny, where he delivered his address today. It was intended as a definite and final statement concerning the French government's position with regards to the forthcoming meeting of the committee of experts, and it is said there is certain to be no alterations in it as long as the present cabinet remains in charge of France's foreign policy.

THE SOVIET'S BAIT.

At what is alleged to have been a world-wide meeting, just held at Moscow, described in the cables as the "international peasants' conference," a red "Peasants' Internationale" was announced, and a permanent steering committee was also announced, among the members of which appears the name of W. H. Green, described as the vice president American Farmers' union. This is the farm organization presided over by Charles F. Barrett, of Georgia; and the state union is presided over by ex-Senator Weaver, of Dawson. These men are in no sense "red," and in no sense associated or allied with radical movements. On the contrary they are conservatives, who have kept their national and state organizations out of politics, and away from all tendencies toward communism and the other tenets of soviet faith.

If the Mr. Green who is being capitalized by this new "Peasants' Internationale," which is intended as a farmers' branch, but misapplied as to America, for there are no "peasants" in this country, is really associated with the new Russian organization, which is probably stronger on paper than anywhere else, it is very certain that neither the National Farmers' union nor the Georgia Farmers' union is in sympathy with it; and in this respect it is equally certain that the chief executive officers of these organizations are not in sympathy with their colleague Green in such a move.

The "peasant" is a typical old world product. His ancestors, under the feudal system, were serfs owned by the landed nobility in a modified form of slavery. His emancipation has been slow, in Russia as late as 1862, and various traces of bondage lingered into modern times.

After the advent of legal freedom the peasant continued to groan under economic conditions. He had little opportunities for becoming a land owner. Land hunger has repeatedly convulsed European countries with agrarian revolt.

Through all of the hardships to what is known as the peasantry, the soviets have tried hard and with little success to convert that element in Russia, and in other European countries, to communism. The convention, or conference, just held in Moscow is the latest move in that direction.

The American farmer is not a "peasant"—not even the tenant classes. They will not relish the idea of being addressed or appealed to as peasants. This country, with its widely diffused farm ownership, has never known the peasant system, and never will. The American farmer is a firm individualist, and when the peasant is transformed into a farmer, even in Russia, he too is one of the most conservative of individuals.

The new movement, even with an American farm leader alleged to be on the board, will make no real headway in this country.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD.

The markets in stocks and securities are just waiting for one particular line to start a revival, when it is believed the whole general list will start an upward movement.

Several happenings in the past week were encouraging. There was the placing of several large orders for locomotives. A revival in steel buying was noted, while the copper market is believed to be at bottom prices, and just waiting for the least hopeful sign.

The general "atmosphere" is regarded as entirely satisfactory, and in the opinion of leaders, all that will be necessary to bring the advances in prices and a big recovery, will be for "someone to start something."

The buying public, of late, has been absent and this absence has held from the markets the impetus that was necessary to bring a general movement upward. But it is now believed that the public is about ready to go back in the market, with the hopeful signs that have been appearing on the horizon.

Chairman Gary, of the U. S. Steel corporation, just two days ago declared that industry was in good shape. Other leaders of industry have communicated optimistic facts as regards business, but the buying public is still holding off.

The revival, however, is bound to come, say leaders, who are firm in their belief that it will be one of extended length.

TURNER'S EXAMPLE.

Turner county has attracted the attention of the whole country by its most successful "comeback" after a boll weevil depression that swept it almost bankrupt just four years ago.

It is truly the most outstanding example of the wisdom of scientifically balanced agriculture in the United States, and has been given more publicity than any county ever received for any kind of an accomplishment.

The late George T. Betts was largely responsible for the reconstruction in Turner county and his work will go on through the influences brought about by his vision.

Recently Turner county inaugurated a "paint-up and clean-up" campaign, and that, too, is attracting the attention of the whole country. Cities and towns have had such campaigns, but it is more or less an innovation for such to be county wide, including school houses, churches, etc.

The Manufacturers' Record, commenting on the last Turner county achievement, says editorially:

"We recommend the spirit with which Turner county has taken hold of this situation. It is preparing to put its best foot forward. It wants to look attractive and clean to itself as well as to visitors. Moreover, its people realize that paint is a preserver not only of wood, but of character. Paint means beauty and cleanliness and long life for wood, and in these things are found a stimulation, a quickening of the mind and body, an awakening of the soul to more and higher aspirations. The school house which is well painted and tidy, as the Turner county people are trying to make theirs, will turn out better students, better and abler men and women whose love for cleanliness will turn their thoughts to love of godliness. They will do better work for material advancement, and the beauty of paint and cleanliness will be indelibly woven into the warp and woof of their lives."

Paint is profitable as a preservative but more profitable as a character builder. Every county in Georgia ought to follow the Turner example.

IMPROVING OPPORTUNITY.

The middle Georgia development program of the Macon Chamber of Commerce, reference to which has been made before in The Constitution, is making excellent progress, according to Macon dispatches; and the Macon Magazine, just issued, in connection with this program, presents perhaps the most complete summary of the resources and advantages of middle Georgia that has ever been published.

Dr. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, contributes a leading article of direct and technical value in reconstructing rural economics, and this reconstruction is admittedly necessary. Another, and perhaps the most impressive of all, is an article showing the southern states to be the most nearly free of encumbrances of any states in the union, with practically 71 per cent of the farms free of debt.

Commenting on this feature, and the encouraging information it conveys, The Macon News says:

"This is in striking contrast with the states of the northwest, where less than half the farms are unencumbered. When we consider the disaster that has overtaken the south on account of the boll weevil, making it necessary for us to revise our entire program and take up diversified farming to a greater extent than ever before, we realize that this is a record of which we may well be proud."

If in so short a time we have overcome, to such an extent, the economic disadvantages of tying to a one crop system as we have in the cotton states, until within the last three or four years, when a different course became imperative on account of the boll weevil devastation, what may we expect in the future with every force in the south working together cooperatively and coordinately for a complete revamping, along sounder lines, of our agricultural life?

There is much to challenge the best thought and the most enthusiastic support of the southern situation as it is, for it could be infinitely worse; and there is every good ground for the widest optimism as to the future.

Lese Majeste.

Prince Henry, of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, consort of the queen of Holland, has a number of wild boars imported from his former estates in Germany. The swine increase so fast that they run wild over the roads and the dykes. As it has been the custom since time immemorial to give princes surnames, one Dutch newspaper has proposed the name, Henry of the Pigs. But that is lese majeste and the paper is heavily fined. But on appeal to the superior court the case is reversed. And the beautiful surname may stick.

Almost.

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty during the first days of the war, is following the lead of other statesmen and is writing his memoirs. One interesting story brought out in his book is the evacuation of Gallipoli and the discontinuation of the British fleet to break through the Dardanelles. It appears that one day the fleet dashed up the narrow straits and was subjected to a heavy bombardment. Several of the great dreadnoughts went down under that close-range attack. The war office in London considered the price too heavy and the attack was never repeated, but now it has been brought to light that if they had attempted the maneuver on the next day there would not have been one shot fired from the Turkish forts. They had no more ammunition. Two weeks later the Germans had smashed through Serbia and Rumania and supplies were plentiful. Had the British returned to the attack they would have entered Germany by the back door.

Gleams of Hope.

Czecho-Slovakia, creation of the league of nations, is doing well, according to President Mazaryk. So is Italy, thanks to Mussolini, and so is Austria, thanks to the league of nations. The Russians are talking of starting to pay France the old czarist debt. Hopeful signs these. The revolution in that country swept beyond its aims, uncontrollable, fallen into the wrong hands. But now the tide is receding. Lenine, fanatic apostle of communism, has been ill for a year. Others are in the saddle. They are speaking of another economic retreat. They say the world is not ripe for Marxian socialism. Right.

What's Your Voltage?

Man is an electrical machine. So says Dr. George Crile at the Chicago medical convention. Emotions, love, hate, fear are only stimuli loosing currents of electricity through certain paths. Each cell of the body is a battery with positive and negative poles. Brain cells are the most positive, liver cells the most negative. In the living energy is stored and made to run the organism, but in the non-living the balance is equalized, inert, non-living. This theory has not yet been proven, says the doctor, although it has stood the test of the surgical clinic. It cannot be proved until the equivalent of a living cell is constructed artificially. Did not the Hebrew poet of antiquity exclaim, "I was made in a wonderful way and deeply mysterious."

London Sinking Away.

Excavations of St. Bartholomew's cloister near London have been completed. A blacksmith shop, a chapel and a laundry have been unearthed as well as the main halls. Eight feet of earth had to be removed from the top of the buildings. This depth of earth was partly due to the fact that London goes down one foot every hundred years. In the city proper many of the old buildings have sunk from sixteen to eighteen feet below the surface since the reformation. Bow Street church, for instance, is sixteen feet below the road. Some day the whole city will have disappeared. We'll be gone then.

"O Hellas O My Country."

Athenians are wearing mourning ribbons around their arms and hats. All in memory of the six ministers of the crown who were executed last year. "Some day these ribbons are going to be red, dyed in the blood of the Venizelists," says one paper. Revolution and uprisings in the army from time to time threaten the life of the small kingdom. It has only a precarious existence at the best. Defeated in war, humiliated in diplomacy, unrecognized by the great powers, without money or credit, Greece cannot get along much longer. Something is going to happen there.

Getting Together.

The earth's continents are slowly being moved. Irresistible pressure from the "Pacific deep" is shifting the Andes mountains eastward. The change is noticeable in a million years. Japan is moving westward. Some day the American continent will be linked with Europe. You'll be able to ride in a taxi from Brooklyn bridge to Ireland. It will be a real job then to keep America out of Europe, it would seem.

* * * *

Spooning in the Parks.

Although London is a great city its vice records are the lowest in Europe. This was brought out recently after an exhaustive investigation when visting American clergymen pointed to the promiscuous loving and cooing that was going on in the parks after nightfall. And the result is that the young people may go along with their bit o'lovin' and the good-natured bobbies won't disturb them.

Machiavelianism.

German workmen in the Ruhr must starve if the French do not come to their assistance. The Berlin government has discontinued its payment for passive resistance. It's up to the French now to pay in order to get out their own reparation deliveries. For the Germans won't pay for it, they say. The game is plain as day. Germany does not hesitate to starve the thickly-populated Ruhr valley if it is going to put France in a bad light. France will get the blame. It's another one of the old tricks. "These Junkers will fool you yet," said Maximilian Harden, able editor of "Die Zukunft."

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, October 28.—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Early up and to market to buy fruit and a policeman pilloried me for walking wrong and I replied sharply, but not until he was out of hearing.

Put in to see G. Nathan and H. Mencken and then to talk with George Lederer, the producer, and found Bobby Higgins, the comick, there and afterward to lunch with Mark Lenscher.

Going to my tailor I made bold to buy a suit of purple cloth albeit he cautioned me no one else would wear it, which is why I will. Home and at my scrivening and quite bravely, too, although a man next door was humming the banana song off key.

In the evening to Oyster Bay to see a kennel of wire-haired fox terrier puppies and played with them, but with some sadness and so home to read a letter from Booth Tarkington and thence to bed.

This is a romance of the cafeteria. A son of a friend came to New York from the far west to study art. In a white tiled place on Forty-second street he was having a late sandwich. With his pencil and pad he sketched a young woman who sat across from him at the marble topped table. He did his work by surreptitious glances but she realized what he was doing and when he had finished asked to see the effort. He passed it over. And so, as the fictionists say, they were married. She was studying music and now they are living in a Greenwich Village attic as happy as turtle doves while he has bequeathed to me the task of placating his parents.

He had been talking to one of the beautiful-but-dumb for an hour and so far as he could notice nothing he said registered. Finally he said something to which she replied intelligently.

"At last," he cried spiritedly, "a lucid interval."

The flossy undertakers offer a depressing note in profiteering. It is stated that an actor who was recently buried left $3,000 to his aged and widowed mother. The burial profiteer sent her a bill for $4,500. Friends along the Rialto had to take up a collection to pay the difference. They have press agents and also professional puffers who mingle among actor folk to win friendship and patronage. Stage people, as a rule, are just as extravagant about funerals as they are about other things.

A funeral press agent incidentally tells this one. One of the partners in a cloak and suit business passed away while on a business trip. The undertaker telegraphed the other partner: "Your partner is dead. Can embalm him for fifty dollars or freeze him for twenty-five dollars." The partner wired back: "Freeze him from the knees up for half price. His legs were frostbitten last winter."

There is a business man in New York who makes two business trips to Chicago each week. He has been doing it ten months. The other week he had a vacation. You guessed it—he went to Chicago.

An actor was boasting of his personal hit in an up state city. "I made the ushers throw away their programs," he said.

A FRIEND.

Text: I Sam. 20.

That earthly languages have in them the word "friend" is an honor to humanity.

It declares our Divine origin. Among the noble friendships that have adorned human history, three seem pre-eminent. These three are Damon and Pythias, David and Jonathan, Jesus and John the Divine.

It is significant that two of these are found in the Christian's Bible, a book which some fervid sentimentalists have called austere.

This is not to be wondered at when we realize that a friendship is imperfect unless it includes harmony in the highest elements of our nature.

And of course these cannot be fully developed without the holy truths set forth in God's Word.

A friend who harms our spiritual nature, however loyal or ardent he may be, is our most awful enemy.

In David and Jonathan, we see friendship "at first sight." How will you explain this? In a word, I would say it is the instant recognition of affinity in spirit and character. These two young men, seemingly separated by a great gulf socially—one a lowly shepherd, the other a prince at court—had nevertheless met together where all lofty souls assemble, even in the court where the high ideal was king. In spiritual blood, one.

Their kinship of spirit made them "one soul in two bodies," which recognized its identity at a glance. It is at once a dreadful and blessed law, that "my own shall come to me."

What sort of friends are you drawing to you? They reveal the quality of your soul.

The way to have good friends is to be good.

FLYERS TO VISIT CENTRAL AMERICA

Washington, October 28.—Army air service pilots have been authorized by Major General Patrick, chief of that service, to make a flight from France field, Canal Zone, to Guatemala City, Guatemala, and other Central American capitals, "for the purpose of establishing closer aeronautical relations between the United States and the Central American republics." The flight is scheduled to take place about the middle of December after preliminary surveys of the route have been completed and suitable landing fields selected.

According to plans announced today, three machines will be used for the trip, one a photographic plane equipped to make charts of the route, in order that they may lead to the creation of an airway linking Central America and the Canal Zone and possibly to a regular aerial service between those points. General Patrick believes that the contemplated flight will demonstrate the practicability of carrying express, mail and passengers between the various cities of Central America and the Canal Zone.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR ROBERT NEELY, PROMINENT FARMER

Waynesboro, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Robert C. Neely were held at the Methodist church Sunday morning at 11:30 o'clock, Rev. J. H. Pearson, pastor of the Methodist church, and Dr. J. P. McFerrin, superannuated Methodist minister, officiating. Interment was at Magnolia cemetery.

The largest audience ever in attendance at a funeral in Waynesboro was in the Methodist church to pay honor to the deceased. Every seat in the spacious auditorium was taken, and the Sunday school room was filled. Many stood through the service.

Floral offerings came from many parts of Georgia, and were evidences of the esteem in which the deceased was held by his own home people and by all those who knew him. Services were simple, as the family had requested.

Mr. Neely was the outstanding character of Burke county, and was perhaps the largest planter in the state.

For several years he had as many as a thousand plows a year. He loved farming and especially was he interested in the production of cotton.

Pall bearers were Frank Burney, Preston Lewis, Jr., Frank Blount, Henry Blount, Shad Steadman, Frank Rackley, Hugh Green and Bill Johnston.

Honorary pall bearers were John H. Holder, W. R. Neel, Allen W. Jones, Stanley Bennett, R. J. Ellison, John A. Blount, R. L. Oliver, E. V. Heath, S. B. Bates, R. M. Murphy, H. C. Hatcher, F. M. Cates, E. T. Agerton, S. Schwartzweiss, A. F. Evans, George Cox, E. E. Chance, H. C. Daniel, E. H. Callaway, Sam Wilcox and R. C. McBridge.

RECORD BUILDING YEAR PREDICTED

Atlanta building figures for the month of October, with three more days to go, have exceeded the $1,000,000 mark, placing the total for the year at approximately $22,000,000 with assurance that the figures for November and December will run the grand total to $25,000,000, according to C. J. Bowen, city building inspector, Sunday.

While the present month's figures fall considerably behind the month of October 1922, which ran more than $2,500,000, the city building inspector attributes the slump this year to the high price of building materials and labor, which aggregate almost 50 per cent more this year than last. Another reason advanced by Mr. Bowen for the comparatively low figures is the fact that not a single large permit for erection of business or commercial property has been let this month, whereas last year the records show many large structures.

Despite the let-up in the building activity during October this year, Mr. Bowen expressed confidence that the year's total figures would reach the $25,000,000 mark, which, with $22,000,000 to date this year, has already shattered all previous building records in Atlanta.

"We have exceeded last year's record by more than $2,000,000," declared Mr. Bowen, "and that was Atlanta's largest total by far of any previous year. I am certain that the next two months, which are usually light building months, will amount to $3,000,000. A number of large buildings are now being planned, so I am informed, and permits will be asked within the next few weeks."

ATLANTA BAPTIST COUNCIL TO NAME LEADERS TONIGHT

Officers for the ensuing year will be elected at the regular monthly business meeting and banquet of the Atlanta Baptist council, which will be held at the Druid Hills Baptist church at 6 o'clock tonight.

Future progress of the organization, which is composed of approximately 125 laymen and ministers of the denomination, and its practical relation to the city of Atlanta will be the principal subject of discussion.

Officers of the organization include Louie D. Newton, president; Dr. M. L. Brittain, vice president; Carlton W. Binns, secretary, and F. S. Etheridge, treasurer. Dr. John F. Purser is executive secretary.

Pike district won the first prize over some close contestants. The fair has been a great asset to Elbert county, observers state.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

HAY FEVER RESORTS.

Now that the season is over, it is safe to mention some of the places where, take it from the home folks or the state health authorities, hay fever sufferers generally find relief.

Alabama—Towns along Mobile bay are resorts for people having asthma.

Arizona—State board of health reports, "Yes, we have no hay fever resorts."

Arkansas—Eureka Sproings, Heber Springs, Sylvan Springs and Winslow, all in the Ozarks.

California—Santa Cruz, Del Monte, Lake Tahoe in the Sierras.

Colorado—Silver Plume and other mountains having an altitude exceeding 7,000 feet.

Connecticut—The Litchfield Hills, New London.

Florida—Partial relief along southern coast.

Georgia—Brasstown, Bald Mountain.

Louisiana — Covington, Abita Springs and Magnolia afford relief from the spring type of hay fever.

Maine—Rangeley Lakes, Kineo, Moosehead lake.

Michigan—Northwestern part comparatively free.

Minnesota—Duluth.

New Mexico—Cloudcroft, Whitcom Springs, Albuquerque, Valley Ranche, Glorietta, Jemez Springs, Sulphur Springs, El Porvenir and East Las Vegas.

New York—Adirondacks, Thousand Island Park, Big Mose, Old Forge, Fulton chain of lakes.

North Carolina—Eagle's Nest, Glen Ayre, Black Dome, Mount Gibs, Hall Back, Mt. Mitchell, in Black mountains, Double Springs, Richland Balsam and Jones Knob in Balsam range, Mt. Buckley, Clingman's Drive, Mt. Love and Alexander, in the Smoky mountains.

North Dakota—Devil's lake.

South Carolina—Caesar's Head, Greenville county.

South Dakota—Hot Springs.

Tennessee—Roan mountain, altitude 6,310 feet.

Utah—Brighton, Ogden, canyon resorts.

Vermont—Green mountains, 1,430 feet altitude.

West Virginia—Terra Alta, Marlinton and Webster Springs, favorable, but altitude (2,500 feet) not enough to afford complete relief.

Wisconsin—Two Rivers, because of the location of peninsula extending seven miles into Lake Michigan.

States not mentioned in the list either have no hay fever resorts or, if they claim such places, the relief afforded is so problematic that I omit them as poor bets.

Any move to find relief from hay fever is more or less a gamble until the victim has tried it for himself. Of course, it all depends on getting away from the particular pollen which may be responsible in the given case. Sometimes the simplest way to do this is to visit a large city, remain in the heart of it, where no weeds flourish unless perchance in some vacant lot. A sea voyage temporarily leaves the pollen far behind, or a Great Lakes voyage, or a sojourn in a mountain resort at considerable altitude, or the victime may just pray hard of a long, heavy rain, which washes the pollen the air and brings relief for days.

If one can't afford to travel or live away from home and can't persuade the rain to come, my best bet would be the use of warm boric acid solution (teaspoonful to pint of boiled water) as a nasal spray, and a gargle three or four times daily, and a good dose of calcium chloride or calcium lactate internally three times a day after meals throughout the season. A good dose is half a teaspoonful of either the chloride or the lactate, well dissolved in a glassful of water. If this does not disturb the stomach, it often proves a valuable relief.

People who really suffer seasonal hay fever ought to be tested with pollen extracts, to determine what is responsible, and then immunized against the responsible pollen before the season arrives. This, any good doctor can do.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Children Wanted.

Yes, we have no bambinos; we think seriously of adopting some, say a small baby girl to begin with. Where would you suggest we should look for one? What blood tests or other precautions would you advise to make sure the baby is free from inherited taint or disease?—(D. H. S.)

Answer—Your modest want may be filled almost anywhere. Lucky you don't crave a boy bimbo. Get in touch with a city maternity hospital, orphan asylum or maybe a Salvation Army officer. Have your physician give the child an examination before you proceed with adoption. (Parents of girl babies, please do not be indignant. I frankly concede that girl babies are just grand when you can't have boys.)

Calories.

How many calories does one burn or consume by walking a mile in the open air. Does uphill or downhill make any difference? How much food value in a glass of natural buttermilk? (D. M.)

Answer—From 200 to 500 calories, according to your weight, manner of walking, swinging arms, etc. This is just my estimate. I know of no actual measurements of the calories burned. Upgrade walking of course consumes more energy. A glass of buttermilk yields about 70 calories.

Teacher and Left-Handed Pupil.

What do you advise about teaching a left handed boy to write? He is very highstrung and temperamental but willing to try. He uses the left hand for everything. His father is a very fine left handed writer but backhanded. His grandfather was left handed. I, his mother, was naturally left handed, but was forced to change to right handedness when I entered school. I was not so thoroughly left handed as he is. (Mrs. J. H. O.)

Answer—A child who has a natural preference for the use of the left hand in writing or other fine work should not be forcibly changed to right handedness. There are many instances of stuttering apparently caused by forcible change; I believe but cannot prove that such forced change is likely to make a person neurotic.

When Dentists Disagree.

Our dentist says my teeth would have lasted longer if when I was young I had had four of my jaw teeth extracted, to keep the teeth from being so terribly crowded, as it is almost impossible to clean between them. (Mrs. W. J. A.)

Answer—Some people still believe the best way to save teeth is to have them extracted. But the better dentists now carefully fill cavities in baby teeth instead of extracting.

WRITE PLAINLY AND CLEARLY

Q.—Are soy beans cultivated to any extent in the United States?

A.—Soy beans were grown on 56,000 farms for the first time in 1922.

Q.—Is it true that papaya leaves or a dried powder made from papaya fruit will make meats tender?

A.—Experiments conducted by the department of agriculture indicate that while the meat is made tender a very unpleasant taste is produced.

Q.—How many dairy cattle are there in the United States?

A.—More than 30,000,000.

Q.—Can unfermented grape juice be made at home?

A.—Yes, the grapes should be crushed as soon as possible after they are picked and pressing should follow immediately. To clarify, transfer the juice into deep vessels, preferably of wood or enamelware, and let it stand our to six hours. Then filter or strain it through cheesecloth without disturbing the sediment formed while standing, and place it in the containers in which it is to be pasteurized and stored. The top should be placed loosely upon the jar to prevent entrance of dust, yeasts, and mold spores. Pasteurization is accomplished by placing the jars in a wash boiler filled with water up to the necks of the jars, and heating the juice to a temperature of 180 degrees F. Then seal and remove at once.

Q.—Is the breeding of mules increasing or decreasing?

A.—Mules for farm work increased from 4,209,769 in 1910 to 5,432,391 in 1920, or nearly 30 per cent.

Q.—How many beekeepers are there in the United States?

A.—2,893.

Q.—Are people allowed to occupy national forest lands for recreational purposes?

A.—Yes, the national forests are open to the free use and enjoyment of the public for recreational purposes. Care with fire and observance of the good sanitary practices are the only conditions imposed. Camping is allowed free of charge and authority to construct and maintain summer homes upon national forests may be secured under permit upon payment of nominal rentals to the forest service.

Q.—On what day of the week did October 22, 1902, fall?

A.—Wednesday.

Q.—How many federal prisons are there within continental United States and where are they?

A.—Three, at Atlanta, Georgia; Leavenworth, Kansas, and McNeil Island, Washington, D. C.

Q.—What were mastodons? Were they found in North America?

A.—The genus name for an extinct elephant. Mastodons began to exist in the Miocene age and became extinct in the Pleistocene age. They were scattered all over the globe, and more than 30 species have been distinguished by paleontologists. It is probable that several species lived in North America, but the one best known and commonly in mind when the term is used, is Mastodon Americanus. This species seems to have ranged all over the United States and Southern Canada, and to have been numerous, for its teeth and bones in a more or less perfect condition, are repeatedly found. A dozen or more mounted skeletons are on exhibition in museums. Careful comparison and study of these show that the mastodon must have had the general form and appearance of a modern elephant, with a somewhat heavier body and flatter forehead than that of the mammoth or Indian elephant, nor did its height exceed theirs on the average—if anything it was less, owing to the shortness of the legs. The tusks, too, were of similar length and they had a characteristic tendency to curl upward, in much the same way as the living elephants.

Q.—How did the term "Quaker" originate as applied to the Society of Friends?

A.—As a term of derision of emotional manifestations of contrition on the part of members of this sect.

Q.—Do large refineries use the blood of cattle or hogs in refining sugar?

A.—They do not, but the U. S. bureau of chemistry says blood could be so used.

Q.—What is the approximate weight of a full grown prairie chicken?

A.—Two pounds—on an average.

Q.—Has Greenland been explored? If so, by whom?

A.—Greenland has been explored by a number of men, among whom are Ross, Inglefield, De Haven, Kane, Hayes, Hall, Greely, Peary and Nansen. Nansen crossed from sea to sea in 1888, and Peary in 1892, and in 1895 he again crossed the ice-cap, ascertaining the insular character of the continent.

Q.—What were the names of William Wallace's parents?

A.—He was the second son of Sir Malcolm Wallace of Eldersbie and his wife, Margaret, daughter of Sir Reginald Crawford, of Crosby.

Q.—How many negro colleges and universities are there in the United States?

A.—The Negro Year Book shows 61.

Q.—How many chickens may be raised on one acre of land?

A.—About 250.

A.—32.2 per cent.

Q.—Which is the better form "lunch" or "luncheon?"

A.—Luncheon is the more formal; lunch may imply a "sketchy" meal, although the word in common use for the noon meal.

Q.—Is the expression "please excuse my glove" correct?

A.—No. This is no longer used, nor is it necessary to remove the glove if it causes an awkward pause.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BREAD.

This summer as I rode by acres of golden grain, ready for the harvest, this word bread came to me more forcibly than ever.

I thought of the millions of mouths that this grain would find its way to—in bread. I thought of the sumptuous meal I had just had with a friend at a rich hotel, where they charged me forty-five cents just for the bread that was served. I thought back to the time when I paid fifteen cents for a "plate of beans" that I might also get that bread.

And then I remembered the time when as a farm hand I had gloried in the Sunday night "bread and milk."

I also thought of the millions who, right then, were wondering where their next bread was to come from.

"Give us this day our daily bread" is the way the Lord's Prayer reads.

I think of the thousands of hands caloused by the plough, that millions may have their bread.

In a larger sense, this bread becomes the corner stone by which we build our bodies, our minds, our characters, our happy success.

It's the purpose that inspires our faith and lifts us when we stumble.

So that, if we understand aright, we will offer a prayer something like this: Give us this day, O Father of us, our daily faith, our fill of hope, our measure of strength, our stream of open vision, and a heart free from the ghost of fear.

And may this be the bread that we shall hope to scatter on many waters and across many seas.

NOT YET DECIDED ON JUDGE'S RACE, SAYS McCLELLAND

Judge L. F. McClelland, of the municipal court of Atlanta, has not fully made up his mind as to whether he will seek election to the superior court judgeship now held by Judge G. H. Howard, as was announced in local newspapers by his friends Sunday, he declared Sunday night, upon his return to Atlanta after a week's absence from the city.

"Well meaning friends," declared Judge McClelland, "were responsible for the announcement in newspapers Sunday morning that I was a candidate for the superior court judgeship. My attention was called to the news story early Sunday morning, but like the announcement of Mark Twain's death, it was somewhat exaggerated.

"Many of my close friends have been urging me for sometime to announce for judge of the superior court, and while I appreciate the efforts they have made in my behalf and are making, I have not, as yet, seriously considered doing so inasmuch as the election will not take place for more than a year."

Decatur County Prosperous; Tobacco Chief Farm Product

BY MALCOLM D. AINSWORTH.

The ravages of war's aftermath have passed over Decatur county; this year, with one of the most successful tobacco crops in its history, farmers will come out into the open road with debt behind.

One hundred years ago in the far southwest corner of the state there lay a dense forest of thickly grown pines; today Decatur county, fresh from the celebration of its centennial, stands out as one of the foremost counties in the state, one among a few that have made tobacco the chief means of support.

Although tobacco stands unchallenged as the agricultural king of the commonwealth, contributing largely to the county's welfare are three outstanding industrial plants that have gained a nation-wide reputation and brought hundreds of thousands of dollars into the banks of the county's capital, on the banks of the Flint river.

Is Tobacco County.

Many years ago Decatur county began to diversify in farming. Many crops were tried, and tobacco finally came to the forefront, until now approximately 2,000 acres of land in the county are covered with cheesecloth tobacco shades for raising the finest quality of cigar tobacco. Some cotton is raised; peanuts are grown extensively, and the cattle and hog business produces annually thousands of dollars in profit, but tobacco is the county's bulwark.

One and a half million pounds of shade tobacco have been sold this year at an average price of 65 cents a pound; 1,000,000 pounds of sun grown tobacco have been sold at an average price of 25 cents a pound, and a small amount of light or cigarette tobacco has added a few hundred dollars to the total. It has been conservatively estimated by bankers and big tobacco men that Decatur's tobacco crop this year will add to the county's gross revenue $1,230,000.

So many things tobacco planters fear have not made their appearance this year. There has been no hail to cut the leaves to shreds, and the farmers have used sufficient paris green to prevent the appearance of the tobacco worm except in small numbers. The leaves as a whole are in good condition. The sweating process is now being applied in the packing houses, and results indicate that good quality cigar wrappers will be plentiful.

Odd Packing Houses.

Years ago, when tobacco began to take a firm hold on the county, most of the planters had to haul their crops many miles to the nearest packing plant, and although this is true now to some extent, the county has been dotted with smaller packing houses. Some are cooperative, others are privately-owned.

Farmers throughout the county have shown marked interest recently in bright or cigarette tobacco. Through the last several years shade tobacco has been more extensively grown, and this will continue so for years, but a quantity of sun-grown tobacco has been noticeable. Cigarette tobacco, however, bids fair to take the place of sun tobacco. It is easier to raise, planters say, and it brings a better price because it's a better quality tobacco.

Shade tobacco grown under a shade of cheesecloth, sometimes covering several acres in one shade—is more expensive to raise, because of the outlay in preparing for it, but the price is always high. The cheesecloth shade protects it from the sun, and the texture and grain of the leaves are always of a higher class than sun-grown leaves.

Beat Boll Weevil.

Now, the tobacco crop is in the packing houses, it has been cured in barns, and in the fields and shades miles of tobacco stalks stand a monuments to Decatur's industry in freeing itself of the trouble other countries are now experiencing with the boll weevil.

Not that the boll weevil forced Decatur county into raising tobacco; the planters were raising it long before the boll weevil was heard about. On the other hand cotton planters are not alone in their troubles with weevils and other pests. Tobacco planters have fought bugs and worms since the first stalk of tobacco was planted, and one-hour hail storms have been known to ruin the county's tobacco crop. Not wiping it out ntirely, but cutting the leaves to such an extent that they have not brought money enough to pay for the priming of the crop.

Located at Amsterdam, a few miles from the Georgia-Florida line, the American Sumatra Tobacco company has one of its largest farms. Throughout the county it has numerous places and employs thousands of people in Decatur county. Amsterdam, however, is the centralization point for Decatur county. Main offices of the company are in New York.

Resources Increase.

Were it not for Decatur's tobacco industry, it is doubtful if the banks in Bainbridge would be in such splendid shape. Now the total bank deposits aggregate $2,000,000 and the total resources will reach $2,700,000. There are four banks in Bainbridge, the First National bank, Decatur County bank, Bainbridge State bank and the Citizens' Bank and Trust company.

Added to the resources from the tobacco crop, two Bainbridge industries bring thousands of dollars into circulation annually. At Attapulgus, 12 miles south of Bainbridge, there is another gigantic industry, the Attapulgas Clay company, the largest fuller's earth plant in the world. It is owned jointly by the Atlantic Refining company and the Standard Oil company. Two thousand cars of fuller's earth are shipped from the plant every year, under the direction of C. M. Shaeffer, vice president and general manager of the company.

In the Miller Manufacturing company, in Bainbridge, operated by M. I. Nussbaum, president, Bainbridge has gained a national reputation as the manufacturing home of the Miller Hydro Soaker, a machine used in bottling plants all over the United States and other parts of the world. The machines sell at prices ranging from $2,000 to $7,500. The machine washes bottles and automatically puts them on another machine ready to be filled with syrup and carbonated water.

Manufacture Crates.

With an annual pay roll of $700,000 and 750 employees, the Elberta Crate company, in Bainbridge, with a branch at Tallahassee, Fla., is the outstanding industry in the county. John M. Simmons, formerly of Dublin and Marshallville, Ga., is president and principal owner of the company, and to Mr. Simmons' farsightedness and civic spirit the county also owes a debt of gratitude for the erection of the Bainbridge Power company, on Spring creek, 12 miles from the city.

The Elberta Crate company is the largest crate manufacturing company in the world, its owners say, with a total output of 1,500,000 complete containers, annually.

In the Bainbridge Power company, the city and the county, as well as other towns many miles away, have a modern hydro-electric plant. The plant has never reached its capacity, but other towns are being added to its lines and when it becomes necessary additions can be made. Spring Creek has been harnessed up, and the stream is believed to be capable of producing as much power as cities for miles around will use in many years.

E. J. Perry, president of the Bainbridge State Bank, is intimately connected with Mr. Simmons in this venture. They organized the stock company, and Mr. Perry and Mr. Simmons are actively in charge of the plant.

Turpentine Industry.

Turpentine operations add to the revenue of the county. C. S. Hodges, of Cyrene, Ga., is probably the largest individual operator in the county, although scores of others are realizing thousands of dollars in net profit.

Bainbridge has a population of 6,000 people, the county about 25,000. Decatur county is 528 miles square. In Bainbridge there are three hospitals; the schools are modern; there are six churches for white people and three hotels. Two railroad lines run through Bainbridge.

War's aftermath struck Decatur county just as forcibly as other counties in the state were hit, but with its diversified farming, cattle, hogs, natural resources, industries and a farsighted citizenship interested in civic progress, the county has prospered. Its farmers are out of debt and happy and its banks are on a good financial basis. Its centennial last week was a magnificent indication of what a community can accomplish by co-operation.

AD MEN GATHER IN BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham, Ala., October 28.—Delegates began arriving here today for the second annual convention of the southeastern district of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which will be in session through Tuesday. Leading churches of Birmingham were addressed today by national and local members of the advertising fraternity on "Truth in Advertising."

Business sessions of the convention begin tomorrow with L. J. Wilhoite, of Chattanooga, president of the southeastern association, and in the evening Lou E. Holland, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, will speak on "World-Wide Advertising."

Tuesday's events center around the industrial parade sponsored by the Birmingham Advertising club and a gridiron dinner concluding the convention in the evening. A float entitled "Miss Truth," will be a feature of the parade. The slogan of the convention is "bigger vision—better business," and the speakers will discuss plans for building up the advertising merchandising and sales ethics of the southeastern district.

COAL OPERATORS SCORED IN REPORT

Washington, October 28.—Anthracite is being sold by some Pennsylvania mine operators, the federal trade commission declared today, at "prices which are neither reasonable nor necessary."

This conclusion was announced in the second of a series of weekly reports on the anthracite price situation as it has developed since the short strike last month. It was grounded on the finding that 6.7 per cent of anthracite is sold by the operators to wholesalers at $9.50 to $9.99 per ton, 45.5 per cent at $10 to $10.99, another 13 per cent at $11 to $11.99, and the remainder, amounting to 34.8 per cent, at $12 to $13, and more.

"Such wide differences in prices in the present period of normal operations," the commission observed, "are neither reasonable nor necessary, and often become the cause, but still more often the excuse, for the excessive prices now being extensively charged the consumer."

During the week ending October 6, the report added, only 38 per cent of the anthracite of domestic size had a wholesaler's profit of 50 cents per ton or more added to it while passing through channels of distribution, while during the week ending September 22, as much as 66 per cent of the coal bore this charge.

The subsidence of "panic demand" for anthracite since termination of the strike, and publicity as to facts, the commission concluded, have operated to bring down the middle man's profits.

Georgia Women Plan Institute For Civic Training

Macon, Ga., October 28.—(Special.) Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, is requesting that every civic organization in the state send delegates on November 14 to a special conference to discuss plans for a second Mercer university institute for the training of women, it was announced today. The institute, which was first held last June 18 to 23, is under the auspices of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs.

Governor Clifford Walker, President Parks, of the Georgia State college for women; P. Roger Miller, executive secretary of the Macon Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, president of Mercer university, and other leading educators will speak to the delegates about the plans for the coming institute. A banquet will be given the delegates by the university and the federated clubs of Macon.

The 1923 institute was so successful that at its close the local club and Mercer university were asked to provide a similar institute for 1924. Over 200 students were enrolled and practically every women's civic club in the state was represented. Mrs. H. D. Russell, of Macon, is conducting the preparations for the next meeting.

The institute, the purpose of which is to train women in civic leadership, is operated in connection with the Mercer summer school and is free to any woman who is a member of a woman's organization, including all patriotic religious, civic, literary, federated or non-federated bodies.

The faculty each year is composed of the most prominent lecturers and educators available.

Contributions in the way of civic help for 1923 have been asked from the following state organizations: The Public Health association; Georgia Pilot club; Board of Trade; Camp Fire Girls, State Missionary societies of Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal churches; Boy Scouts; Girl Scouts; American Legion; Georgia State Medical association; Federated Women's clubs; Chamber of Commerce, and the United Daughters of Confederacy.

BIG INSURANCE CO. GROWING STEADILY; KING NOW IN FIRM

No stronger evidence of Atlanta's firm position in the insurance world is needed than to point to the large number of strong insurance agencies and companies of this city. Statistics show that as an insurance center Atlanta leads the entire southeast, and is reckoned as one of the largest insurance cities in the country.

Among her many strong companies in the insurance field, none are more strongly entrenched than MacIntyre, Scott & Knight, located at 505 Atlanta Trust building, who are agents of the Commercial Union Insurance company, of London, said to be the largest insurance company in the world.

The firm of MacIntyre, Scott & Knight has been established in Atlanta since May, 1921, and was the outgrowth of the old Haas & MacIntyre company. It was composed originally of D. L. MacIntyre, John I. Scott, J. O. Knight and Louis J. Leonard. The death some time ago of Mr. Leonard brought about a change in the personnel of the company, his interest being taken over by J. O. King.

the addition of Mr. King to the company has added strength and prestige to it, as he has a large circle of business and social friends throughout this entire section. Mr. King was born and reared in Atlanta, graduating at the Georgia Tech. For fourteen years he was with the Hartford Fire Insurance company, and he brings to his new connections not only a fine personality, which wins and holds friends for him, but also a wide experience in the insurance field. He is a nephew of Judge Alexander King, of the United States District court, and a son of E. P. King, secretary to the Scottish Rite Masonic bodies.

In addition to the experienced men who compose the company there is associated with it a number of live wires—prominent young business men—such as J. R. Rauschenberg, George White, Henry Peeples, J. F. Kirkpatrick, C. W. Ashurst, John Inman Bell and others.

All are young men, full of enthusiasm, with their whole efforts in the business.

The company enjoys an enviable reputation for its clean cut methods in the handling of its large and constantly growing business. Prompt settlement of claims, and the high reputation of the insurance companies represented have won for the firm the full confidence of its policyholders. These methods spell success and the company reports a steady increase of every class of business.

In addition to representing the Commercial Assurance Company of London, MacIntyre, Scott & Knight have the Hartford Fire Insurance company, of Hartford, Conn., the Northwestern Fire and Marine, the Jersey Fire Underwriters and the Columbia Casualty company.

As local agents they represent the American Insurance company, of Newark, N. J., the St. Paul Fire and Marine company (automobile division), of St. Paul, Minn., the Columbia Casualty company, of New York, and the Northwestern Fire and Marine.

NEW HOME SOON FOR THE DIXIE SEAL & STAMP COMPANY

After a location on North Broad street for several years the Dixie Seal & Stamp company has recently completed arrangements for removal to a large and more convenient building at 33 Poplar street.

Within the next few days the company will be moving into this new location, which is just across the street from the post office, and just a door or two beyond the entrance to the Haas-Howell building.

In their new location the company will occupy an entire building, this much room having become necessary due to the wonderful growth of this company during the last few years.

"Sort'o like leaving an old home for us to be moving," said Arthur Wrigley, of the Dixie Seal & Stamp company, "but after the public learns of the change we think our customers will come to see us as often as heretofore, especially so as the new place is 'just around the corner' from the old stand.

"Our new home has three floors and a well lighted basement; the heavy stamping machinery will be in the basement; office and store on the first floor, the multigraph department, where nine or ten employees are always busy as bees, will use the second, while the rubber stamp, stencil, seal and steel dies, etc., crews will occupy the top floor.

"Our business has been growing so much that it became necessary for us to find larger quarters. Of course, we wanted to stay as near the center of town as possible, and this move puts us right at the post-office. You know we do quite a large mail order business, reaching from North Carolina to Texas."

DUNHAM HEATING SYSTEM IS POPULAR ALL OVER COUNTRY

With heating equipment which it it claimed by many of the leading architects and engineers of the country is among the most standard and the very best obtainable, the C. A. Dunham Heating company is being kept busy installing its system just now all over the entire south.

Perhaps no heating concern is better known or more popular than the Dunham company. It has branches all over the world, and serves a large clientele.

The Atlanta branch is in charge of W. K. Andrews as sales manager, and with offices in the Healey building. Mr. Andrews' branch takes care of all of the southeastern trade.

The company features valves and steam specialties, and offers a special engineering service to architects and contractors. Dunham specialties are declared to stand foremost in the engineering field, while the Dunham system of heating is designed for every type of building from the modest little home to the mammoth skyscraper.

Among recent contracts which Mr. Andrews, the local sales manager, has handled and completed, and which show the importance of the Dunham system, are such buildings as the Roth Hunter apartments, the A. T. Gaither apartments, the State Highway building, the Atlanta Joint terminals, and many other apartments and public buildings, including the Commercial Exchange, now in course of construction.

The location in Atlanta of this branch is one of the important branch concerns maintained in this section by large world-wide companies, and is just another evidence of how well equipped Atlanta is to offer the very best in building service. Through the Atlanta office prospective builders and building owners can secure the Dunham service through their architects, heating contractors, architectural contractors and engineers, or can secure same direct from the C. A. Dunham company.

Mr. Andrews is very much pleased over the large amount of business the company is doing, and is quite optimistic over the future.

A. P. M'CRARY LEAVES FOR IMPORTANT WORK ON FLORIDA CONTRACTS

A. P. McCrary, who for the past two years has handled the buying and disposing of thirteen government camps in the southeast for the J. B. McCrary company, of Atlanta, has just left for St. Petersburg, Fla., where he will have general charge of the $200,000 sewer contract the J. B. McCrary company has begun at that place. Mr. McCrary will also have general supervision of all other construction work throughout the state of Florida for the J. B. McCrary company. The work of the company in Miami, Miami Beach and St. Petersburg amounting to over $500,000. Mr. McCrary will make his headquarters in St. Petersburg and Miami, Fla.

The new specially designed Buckeye traction ditcher has just arrived at Miami and will begin excavating sewer ditches at this place. This machine is especially designed and built for cutting the limestone rock underlying all of Miami, and is a great labor saving machine, handling this rock at one fourth the cost of excavating by hand labor. Mr. Henry Freeman, a Senoia, Ga., boy is in charge of this work and the contract will amount to $176,000.

The latest information from Miami Beach, where the J. B. McCrary company has been building a sewer system, some of it two feet below main low tide, is very encouraging. The island on which Miami Beach is located consists largely of material pumped in from Biscayne Bay and offers unusual construction difficulties. This work will be completed by November 15, six weeks ahead of the allotted contract time, which is a record for that territory and extreme conditions under which it has been executed. Charles Harold Cook, of Cusseta, Ga., is in charge of this work, which amounts to approximately $94,000.

Further activities of the J. B. McCrary company in Florida are at DeLand, where they are installing a sewerage, water and paving system at a cost of $550,000, and a paving contract at Winter Garden, Fla., at a cost of $210,000. They have just completed a large paving contract at Melvern, Fla., at a cost of $110,000.

LOCAL FIRM GETS RECORD PRINTING JOB IN ALABAMA

An Atlanta firm, Foote & Davies has been awarded the contract for what is probably the biggest printing job ever given in the south. It is for the printing of the revised edition of the Alabama code. The price will run between $70,000 and $75,000 and it will take fifteen carloads of book paper to furnish the stock for this work.

There will be four volumes to the new code, each containing 1,500 pages. There will be 10,000 copies of each volume printed.

Judge J. J. Mayfield, of Montgomery, is editor in charge of revision of the code, while he, with Governor Brandon and former secretary of state Brown compose the revision committee. Judge Mayfield resigned from the Alabama supreme court bench to undertake this work.

It is understood that printing and publishing houses from all parts of the United States were asked to submit bids on this work, but the local firm was lowest bidder.

A young man apprenticed to the printer, John Darby, wrote the famous ballad, "Darby and Joan," using his employer and his wife as the subjects.

STARVED HEARTS

CHAPTER XXV.

The Wedding Day.

In response to Chandler's urging, Madelon set the following Wednesday for their wedding day. It would still leave them a few days before the arrival of Stephens Lane. Chandler seemed more anxious than Madelon to have the marriage performed before Lane could enter his objection.

They planned to motor up to Los Angeles to a church of Madelon's faith. Chandler confessed himself indifferent in the matter of religion; in fact, Madelon strongly suspected that he was on agnostic.

Rather tentatively, Madelon acquainted Barbara with their plans and asked her to accompany them. She wanted Barbara's presence desperately, but did not wish to involve her in anyway which might later bring upon her the wrath of Stephen Lane.

Barbara, however, laughed away her fears.

"Of course, I'll go with you. I wouldn't desert you at this time for the world. I'm not such a slave to Stephen's will as all that...And I hope I'm not a coward."

She was sitting on the floor before a gaping trunk, laying into it carefully folded chiffon and silks. Suddenly she stopped and dropped a heap of rosy gauze into her lap.

"How I shall hate going back without you! You've brought me youth and laughter again. I've learned to live since you came.

"Never mind", Madelon dropped a kiss on the soft dark hair. "We'll make Uncle Stephen let you come to visit me in Hawaii. As a married woman, I'll be ever so much more important, and he won't dare boss me. I'll sic my husband on him," she declared with a flash of mischief. "Oh, it'll be fun having you and Ann in my own home!"

Her face darkened suddenly.

"Home" she repeated softly, "why I haven't thought of that since the day Julian and I. . . ."

She broke off and went quickly into her own room and closed the door.

Barbara looked after her compassionately. She was so young to find her life in such a muddle.

Strongly Barbara doubted the wisdom of Madelon's means of escape. How little she knew of Chandler after all? True, he seemed charming enough, but might he not later exhibit some unexpected traits which were as bad, or worse, than Stephen Lane's tyranny?

Barbara was beginning to think of her husband in a new light. Madelon's suggestion that behind that stern mask might lie a deep and abiding loneliness, a hunger for companionship lingered with her. Suppose she should try with tender fingers to find a weak point in that icy reserve? Suppose she should eventually break through, and discover a warm, yearning heart beneath?

It was spring now at home, late spring, and the forsythia would be blossoming on the terrace and the lilacs and early roses in the garden. She would have Mastesr open all the windows to their fragrance. Wherever possible, she would dispense with heavy silks and tapestries and let in the sunlight. She wanted to see light, crisp curtains fluttering in the warm spring wind.

It was many months now since she and Madelon had come away. Perhaps Lane himself had changed. Certainly, she herself had. She felt well and strong and, except for the sharp stab at her heart when she thought of Duane Farley, she believed that she might almost find contentment, if she could win Lane from his isolation.

Sitting there before her opened trunk, she made a vow with herself to try as she had never tried before.

Madelon's wedding day was all that the most hopeful bride could desire. She awoke to a cloudless sky, and sparkling sea. The air was laden with the breath of flowers.

She was very young and lovely in her simple white frock and hat. Chandler found her flushed cheeks and shyly averted eyes bewitching. He turned frequently to look at her, as he drove the three of them up to town. Barbara noted the eagerness of his eyes with a little wistful sigh.

After the bright sunlight, the church was chill and gloomy. Madelon shuddered momentarily.

But when she and Chandler stood before the alter, she was quite calm. Resolutely, she put from her the flashing thought that she would have given her life if this had been Julian Barton who stood beside her, her hand in his.

Like Barbara, in her unhappy bargain she would play fair. She would give the man whose ring she was about to wear, unceasing loyalty, respect, and as much affection as she was able to summon.

With her hand in his, under the spell of his tremendous physical magnetism, she felt that her vows must be easy to fulfill.

NO. 4—CHARMING WINDOW EFFECTS.

Written by Julia Hoyt (Mrs. Lydig Hoyt.)

The treatment of the windows in a room is extremely important, almost as important as the walls, the difference being that whereas the walls must be done before the furniture, carpets, etc. are placed in the room, the window problems can be left to the end. I say "can," but indeed I think it decidely the best plan. I have found that by far the most satisfactory method of choosing materials for the windows and whatever furniture is to be covered, is to try many materials in the room after the walls are completed. What seems a delightful combination with the color of the walls as we carry that color in our minds, may prove a tragic disappointment when actually carried out.

The Fundamentals.

Consider the fundamentals: First is the question of whether or not it is advisable to hide the woodwork of the windows. In deciding this we should bear in mind primarily the width of the window. I feel that this design of the woodwork is not so important for, unless it is ornate beyond endurance, a coat of the right color paint will make it perfectly acceptable. If the windows are very narrow it is a good plan to have the curtains start at the side of the woodwork, which means that the sides of the frame will be completely covered. This adds considerably to the impression of size. Otherwise I think that as a rule it is prettier to have the curtains frame the glass. This, of course, pertains to curtains which hang straight, not those which are looped back. In the case of the looped-back curtain, the best effect is gotten by having them meet at the top and then caught neatly back three-quarters of the way down the window. In general, I think that curtains hung in this way should have inside drapes of a lighter material.

All women love valances(I think. There are so many amusing and charmingly original ways to treat them, too. They are always good, except, perhaps, in a low-ceilinged room. But even then I think that a very narrow valance or trimming does very little to lower the apparent height of the room, and adds much to the charm of the window. I know some do not agree with me on this point. However, when a room is small and low the windows should be trimmed accordingly. If a figured material is used the design should not be large; then, too, it is best to have the curtains reach only to the window sill in such instances. A pretty scheme is to have the valance made of the chintz or other figured material used on the chairs or sofa in the room, having the curtains of white or cream-colored material.

Should Be Like Picture.

I think that a good thing to keep in mind is that a window with its curtains should be as much like a picture in its frame as possible. Where it is practical, I think it is always wisest not to cover the entire window-pane even with thin gauze or net curtains. Certainly in the country it is a pity, even in a bedroom, to shut out the vistas of trees or flowers. It is a good idea to have these thin inside curtains made so that they can be drawn apart.

Another interesting and convenient way of using the inside curtains to their best advantage is to have them cut in half—that is, one pair for the upper part of the window and one for the lower. In this way the upper pair can be drawn together should the light be too strong, leaving the lower ones apart; thus the view, whatever it may be, will not be lost.

I was asked the other day if window shades were not being abolished. In my next article I shall explain why I answered "No" with great feeling.

JANE HEDDEN HAT PATTERNS

EDITORIAL.

Making your own hat to fit your head exactly and to match your costume is very satisfactory.

There has never been a time when women have had so much difficulty in getting correct headsizes.

The hats seem always too large or too small in the headsize because women have either a great deal of hair or have cut it off.

The bob hair-dress has caused the outstanding changes in hat styles that have occurred in the last five years. These changes are in headsizes, crown shapes and brim lines. When the length of hair is cut and the knot or coil done away with, the headsize is made smaller. If the brim headsize is smaller, the crown must be smaller or it will look disproportionate to the face and the hat brim.

When the knot is removed there is nothing to hold a hat up in the back. There can't be a tilted line from the back (except with a bandeau); hence, the crown of the hat must be deeper. Little by little hat crowns have grown higher (or deeper) so that they may be worn comfortably low on the head. Soft cap and section crowns are especially adapted to the change in crown lines.

A bob changes the contour of the face by changing the frame of the face oval. For this reason the brim of the hat (also a frame for the face oval) must be changed.

The clever designer studies these style changes in hair cuts and facial contours and makes millinery conform to them.

You who make your own hats need only to adapt the most becoming style and make it fit your head and match your costume.

No. S-1017.

Windows are cut in the brim of this quaint mushroom. Narrow ribbons form a lattice over which trial sprays of handmade flowers. The effect is of a simple but sophisticated hat charming of line and design. The latticed windows throw light on the face in a flattering manner and keep the hat from throwing heavy shadows. The principle involved is much the same as that of correctly lighting a painting. Light may be thrown on a picture so as to enhance or ruin it. The same thing happens with shading a face. The girl who can not ordinarily wear a brim hat will find this one both comfortable and becoming.

MATERIAL REQUIRED.

One soft collared crown, 4 yards brace wire, 1 1-2 yards 18-inch material, 5 yards No. 1 1-2 or No. 2 ribbon, 1 flower or flower material.

No. S-696.

Model No. 696 shows the Chinese influence very strongly. Chinese blue, Chinese red and gold are the predominating shades in an embroidered Chinese motif. An imported fabric carrying out the same coloring as the embroidered drapes crown and coronet of the turban frame in soft folds. These shades make admirable color harmony with the cloth autumn wraps and fur coats of winter. Colors may be so blended as to make the hat suitable for wear with a variety of garments.

MATERIAL REQUIRED.

ONE soft pressed crown, 1 cap lining, 3-8-yard elastic net or heavy grade canvas, 2 yards brace wire, 3-4 yard fancy 18-inch material for drape, 1-8 yard plain material 18 inches wide, embroidery materials.

No. S-697.

Dash and style are attained here by the use of high shirred rosettes. Gorgeous color effect is attained by using two tones of velvet and soleil as brown and henna, king's blue and black or brown and sand. While the hat looks complicated, it really is merely a matter of material shirrings and following definite directions carefully. The hat is suitable for formal afternoon, church or dressy street wear. Proportions are beautifully worked out by the designer. An elongated rolled grim lifts from the hair in most becoming fashion so as to detract from extreme height. The brim being narrow and the rosettes wide keeps it from being heavy.

MATERIAL REQUIRED.

One soft pressed crown, 1 cap linnet, 3 yards brace wire, 1 cap lining, 1 5-8 yards velvet and soleil, 18 inches wide.

No. S-698.

A flaring plastron of ribbon forms the smart trim of this tailored model. Such a design in the shops costs many times the price of materials. The real cost is in the production of the first design. Elegant simplicity of line is the thing that most clever designs strive for and is the thing most difficult of attainment. Our designers present this to you with working patterns complete so that you have none of the difficulties of organization, all you need to do is to cut and fit together the pattern hat designed for you.

MATERIAL REQUIRED.

One sofe pressed crown, 1 cap lining, 3-8 yard elastic net, 4 yards brace wire, 1 yard velvet, 5-8 yard facing 18 inches wide, 6 yards ribbon.

No. 2238.

Hand embroidery continues to be the popular and desirable trimming for felts. No hat gives more service than a felt. By using rich embroidery materials and design a felt becomes a thing of beauty as well as service. Any large felt can be cut the shape of this design and the edge and side crown embroidered according to the pattern. Ordinary felts valued at $3.00 are because of this handwork made to be worth $15.00. No other handwork shows so much for the time spent on it.

MATERIAL REQUIRED.

One felt, 1 lining, chenille and yarn.

Next Week: "A Lover in Chains"
BY ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

He was wise enough—wise in women's ways—to hide his feeling from Lorna's sharp vision. She flattered herself that her old friend was displaying jealousy. This supposition could not fail to please her. Ralph had become such a nuisance in her opinion, that she was determined to show him that she could easily attract other men. She would flout him and his whole family—as well as her own—by playing about with Conny Degger.

So she treated Degger particularly nicely one morning when she and Degger met Ralph on the beach. She overlooked some rather crude things about the young man, and from the shore where Ralph lay she appeared to be having a most delightful time with her fishing partner.

It made her angry to see how Ralph hung around. She delayed coming ashore as long as she could, hoping he would go away. She did not want a scene with him.

Ralph, however, did not even rise from his recumbent position when the fishing party reached the dory on the strand between the out-thrust reefs. Lorna hurried away, and Ralph did not attempt to join her, as she had feared he would. Instead, he got up slowly and aided Degger draw up the lightkeeper's dory.

"Awf'ly nice girl, that," said Degger boldly.

"Yes."

"Good sport, too. I never met a nicer girl."

"I don't believe you ever did," said the other, his level gaze boring Degget rather unpleasantly.

"Oh, I don't know!" ejaculated Degger, with sudden warmth and a sneer on his lips. "I've known a lot of girls—"

"But not of her kind," broke in Ralph. "And don't you think it! Watch your step with Lorna!"

"What's the matter with you, Endicott?" snapped Degger. "I don't have to take orders from you."

"Not as long as you go straight, you don't," Ralph assured him. "But we all think too much of Lorna Nicholet around here to see anybody try to misbehave with her."

He turned on his heel then and strode away. Degger sneered after him.

"Thinks he is the Great I Am!" he muttered. "You'd think he owned the girl. And putting on his airs with me!" Degger's scowl grew darker as he added: "Guess the beggar wants me to pay up. That is like these rich fellows. They are mighty free offering to lend you money; but they make you feel the obligation forever after."

Now, Conway Degger quite wronged Ralph on this point. The latter had entirely forgotten that Degger was in his debt from some time back in their college days.

Coming up from the shore following his brief conversation with Degger, Ralph found the old lightkeeper mending a seine outside the lighthouse door.

"Wal, now," said Tobias, "ye look some het up. I seen ye soaking yourself out there on the sand in the sun, and I cal'late you'd look like a 'biled lobster' when you come up. And you do."

Ralph knew that it was an angry flush Tobias saw on his face. He grinned ruefully.

"More than the sun to make a fellow's blood boil, Mr. Bassett, sometimes."

"Oh, sugar!" rejoined the lightkeeper. "Ye don't let that feller bother you none, do you, Ralph?"

"I don't like him much," the young man said stiffly.

"You meaan you don't like him to be fooling around Lorny, hey?" said Tobias, his head shrewdly on one side.

"It is none of my business—"

"Course it is! Course it is!" exclaimerd the lightkeeper vigorously. "I've just about sized this Degger feller up, I cal'late. His folks ain't any too well off, and I bet he'll never get round-shouldered carrying his money around."

"What has that to do with it, Mr. Bassett?" demanded Ralph, rather startled.

"Why, Lorny can't afford to waste her time with a feller like him," the lightkeeper declared coolly. "She's got to marry somebody with money. I know by the way Miss Ida was talkin' the other day over here, she was worried about Lorny marrying."

"What do you mean, Tobias Bassett?" ejaculated Ralph, dropping down on the bench beside him.

"Cal'late that is why they were so anxious for you and her to make a match of it," pursued the lightkeeper. "Of course, she don't know nothing about it. But I give it as my opinion that a rich husband for Lorny is going to take a great burden off the shoulders of her family."

"You know very well Lorna wouldn't marry me, Tobias Bassett!" exclaimed Ralph angrily. "You needn't talk as though I were at fault."

"Oh, sugar! I don't see you fallin' over your own feet none, young man, to make her marry ye."

He stopped right there. Tobias Bassett was wise in his iniquity. Without coming out unequivocally and stating in so many words that the Nicholets had lost the greater part of their wealth, he had intimated enough to throuble the waters of Ralph's mind.

It was long before this that the lightkeeper and his sister had been put in possession of Jethro Potts' personal estate by Judge Waddams. The nine days' wonder of that happening was past for Clinkerport folk, and as the old couple made no splurge with their fortune, the neighbors put aside the matter for fresher gossip.

Whenever Tobias took his pay check to the bank and drew the cash needed for their household expenses, he secretly desired to ask the cashier, Mr. Bentley, to let him see that eight thousand in real money so as to be sure the bank was still safely guarding it.

Tobias usually went to Clinkerport in the sloop Farybird on these market expeditions, now that the weather was good. Conny Degger, on a certain occasion, went with him.

Degger's salvage from the wrecked motorboat had been an oar, one seat-cushion, and a broken pennant staff. In other words, the craft had been a total loss. And this fact appeared to worry the boarder considerably.

He paid his weekly stipend of four dollars to Miss Heppy with admirable promptness, and he had sent for a fairly well-filled trunk, so that he made a presentable appearance in public. But he seemed to be, as Tobias had hinted to Ralph, not overburdened with money.

Nor did Degger seem to make himself popular with the loafers around the Clinkerport inn and the livery stable, as so many of the youthful summer visitors did. On one occasion, however, Tobias heard and saw the boarder in earnest conference with a man who seemed to be quite well acquainted in Clinkerport, although he was not a resident.

"Well, Conny, take it from me," said the individual, "somebody has got to pay for that motorboat. When a fellow treats me right I'm the easiest person who ever did another a good turn. But they say patience runs out of virtue after a while. That's my case exactly."

"But I haven't any money to spare at present, Burtwell," complained Degger, quite loud enough for the lightkeeper to hear.

"Get busy then and find some. How do you manage to live, I want to know?"

"On expectations," Degger rejoined airily.

"Huh! I've seen her. She looks all to the good," Burtwell said coarsely. "Folks rich, I suppose?"

"As cream," admitted the optimistic Degger.

"And you expect to make a killing, Con?"

"I fancy I'm not altogether wasting my time," the younger man drawled in a tone that made Tobias want to kick him.

"Well," Burtwell said, "I can't afford to wait forever for the money I had to advance on that motorboat transaction. I tell you there is a limit to my patience. But there may be a way for you to help me—and yourself—to some of the wherewithal."

The lightkeeper took his packages then and passed the couple on the store porch. He did not glance at Degger, nor did he wait for the fellow to join him at the dock. He got under way in the Marybird and let the boarder exercise his legs on the shell road if he wanted to get back to the light for supper.

It seemed as though circumstances played into his hands. Tobias was conceited enough perhaps to believe that he really was foredoomed to act the part of matchmaker. At any rate, there was Lorna on the shore when the Marybird drifted in to her moorings, the site of which was marked by a nail keg.

Tobias picked up the bight of the anchor cable and looped it upon a becket, taking a turn or two for safety. Then he drew up the dory, put aboard his purchases, locked the Marybird's cabin, and sculled ashore. Lorna smiled upon him.

"Nice day, Lorny."

"So it is, Mr. Bassett. Didn't Mr. Degger come home with you?"

"Oh, sugar! I forgot all about him, didn't I? Did you want to see him in partic'lar, Lorny?"

"Just wanted somebody to play with," she confessed.

"Wal! wal! you air to be pitied," he said. "Won't Ralph do?"

"Ralph Endicott is no fun any more. He's as grouchy as a sore-headed bear."

"I want to know!"

"Yes. He's going away soon, anyway, I understand. And Im glad of it," the girl declared.

"Oh, sugar! I suppose that's so," reflected Tobias, filling his pipe. "Wal, a feller can't always appear chirpy an' lively when things is going wrong with him!"

She flushed more deeply then, and her eyes began to spark. "If you are hinting that I have anything to do with making Ralph Endicott unhappy—"

"Not a-tall! Not a-tall!" the lightkeeper hastened to say. "But I reckoned you'd know full as much about the Endicott's private affairs as I do."

"Mr. Bassett! what is it?"

"Wal, they do say Henry Endicott has jest about wrecked the family fortune putterin with them inventions of his. 'Tain't to be wondered at. Might have been expected. Foolin' away both time and money. Yes, sir!"

"Lost their money? The Endicotts? You can't mean it!" ejaculated Lorna.

"Does seem too bad," went on Tobias. "'Twarn't Ralph's fault, of course. But he feels it, I cal'late, as bad as any of 'em. Like enough he's goin' away from here, like you say, to get him a job of work. I shouldn't wonder,' 'sighed the gulleful Tobias.

"Why, Mr. Bassett, this is awful!" There was real sympathy in Lorna's shocked tone.

It was plain that what he had said had made its impression on Lorna Nicholet's mind. She wandered away, deep in thought and forgetting all about Conny Degger.

"I cal'late," muttered Tobias, "I have started something at last. Now, let 'er simmer!"

CHAPTER VI.

The weather had been uncertain all day. When Lorna and Degger came over from the Clay Head and borrowed the lightkeeper's dory, Tobias would surely have warned them against going out had he seen them. But he was taking his daily nap, for his care of the lamp in the tall tower kept him awake a good part of each night.

Gusts of wind were swooping down upon the sea and ruffling it into lurid patches far off shore—certain indication of coming trouble. After the dory was beyond the shelter of the reefs the pleasure seekers saw streaks of driving rain racing across the wave tops, away out on the open sea. But the fish began to bite ravenously.

It was while their luck was so good that Lorna saw suddenly a figure scrambling over the shore end of the outer reef, and waving an energetic arm to them.

"Now, what does he want?" the girl demanded, with no little exasperation.

"Who is it? The skipper?" Conny asked lightly, and without turning his head.

"It's Ralph," she said shortly.

"Oh! Endicott? He is always trying to butt in, isn't he?" suggested Conny, laughing. "Sour grapes, I suppose. Let him swing his arm off. He doesn't own this boat."

It was several minutes before Ralph realized that Lorna at least was deliberately ignoring his effort to warn her of peril. Or was she so much under Conny's influence that she considered his wisdom in weather matters above that of Ralph?

He saw at last that the fishers were determined to yield him no attention. So, turning swiftly, he scrambled back to the sands. At the cove lay his own motorboat, the Fenique, the fastest of the small flock of craft moored in the cove. In five minutes he reached the strand, pushed in a skiff, and sculled out to the Fenique's moorings.

In supite of the seaworthiness of the lightkeeper's dory, Ralph did not believe Degger was seaman enough to handle the boat in a black squall. On him might rest the burden of the couple's rescue from the tempest that threatened.

He snubbed the skiff's painter to the mooring buoy. The motorboat was in readiness for immediate use. He cast off the mooring hawser and went forward to turn the wheel. The spark caught the first time he threw the wheel over. The exhaust coughed sharply. Ralph eased on the engine and seized the spokes of the steering wheel as the propeller blades began to revolve.

As he steered the motorboat around the out-thrust rocks, the black squall burst. The dory had not escaped the peril of it. Lorna and Conny had got up the kedge, and now Degger was at the oars tugging vainly to drive the dory shoreward.

Lorna screamed in satisfaction at sight of the Fenique with Ralph standing in her cockpit. It was a cheering sight.

But Conny missed his stroke as he glared over his shoulder to see the approaching rescuer. A wave slapped aboard the dory, half filled it, and dragged one of the oars from Degger's hand.

Lorna was at last thoroughly frightened. She was face to face with death. She could not swim to the shore in such a sea as this. Indeed, no swimmer could live in it. If Ralph in his motorboat did not overtake them soon, Lorna believed there was little hope for Degger and herself.

Ralph's voice (how full and unshaken it seemed)! came down the wind to them:

"Stand by to grab the rail! Look out for yourself, Degger!"

He threw the steering wheel over and lashed the spokes to hold it steady. As the Fenique's bow swerved off from the floundering dory, Ralph sprang up on the roof of the cabin and flung himself along its slippery surface to reach Lorna's outstretched hands.

"Hold hard, Lorna!" he shouted.

The motorboat slid past the dory. Ralph fairly snatched the girl out of it.

Conny Degger had missed the Fenique's rail, but he had gripped the bight of rope trailing overboard. He was being towed in the sea, dragged through the bursting waves rather than over them. His precarious situation was not to be derided.

A curling sea toppled over their heads and fell, a smashing weight, upon the Fenique. The motorboat staggered under the impact of the blow. The cockpit was awash as Ralph stumbled down into it with Lorna in his arms.

The girl struggled out of his grasp. She seized the rail, gripping it with both hands.

"Conny! Save him!" she shrieked.

But Ralph had first their ultimate safety to think of. He leaped for the wheel and relieved the strain under which the Fenique labored. He payed off carefully until the motorboat began to ride the billows more buoyantly.

When he stoppered the wheel again and turned to aid Degger, Lorna was creeping after with the evident intent of laying hold of the rope to which the man clung. But she did not possess the strength to drag him inboard.

Ralph set her aside with a fending arm and seized the rope. With a long haul and a heave, he brought the gasping Degger under the rail of the motorboat.

As the craft rolled, Ralph leaned over the rail and seized the half-drowned Degger just as the latter's grip slipped from the rope. While the rail dripped to the running sea the rescurer heaved him inboard.

Then Ralph leaped back to the wheel and righted the motorboat again. When she was once more headed right, flying ahead of the blast, he glanced over his shoulder. Lorna was on her knees in the bottom of the boat with Conny Degger's head in her lap. The tableau was somewhat startling.

As Ralph conned the course of the plunging Fenique he likewise conned the problem of how to get rid of Conway Degger without inspiring in Lorna's breast a greater liking for the fellow than he believed she already sustained.

They reached the Lower Trillion life-saving station and drove on for the mouth of the harbor. A can buoy marked the channel and a deep-mouthed bell in a bracket on the end of the stone pier tolled intermittently. Ralph skillfully steered into the calm pool behind this breakwater.

Race in Southern Conference Is Getting Warmer

Invasions by Dixie Teams Were Disastrous Saturday; Recent Results Discussed

Tech, Georgia, Alabama, Vandy, Washington and Lee, Florida, Kentucky, Auburn Unbeaten in Conference.

Three southern elevens are at home today nursing the bruises and embarrassment of emphatic drubbings received on their invasion of territory beyond the Mason and Dixon line.

In one case, however, elation almost equalled depression, for Georgia Tech scored a touchdown on Notre Dame.

Tech's markers failed to count materially, and the Jackets bore the short end of a 35-7 score.

The Praying Colonels from Centre, after putting up stiff resistance in the opening period, were completely humbled by the Quakers of Pennsylvania, who ran wild over the visitors and won, 24 to 0. Mississippi university, the third southern eleven striving for intersectional honors, was subdued by St. Louis university, 28 to 3.

While Tech and Notre Dame held southern fans' attention, conference elevens were both adhering to and scrapping the dope sheet in five battles that are to have serious effect on team standings.

University of Maryland, after receiving a drubbing by V. P. I. last week, changed tune Saturday and walloped North Carolina, 14 to 0. It was more than a table turning for Maryland, which, in winning yesterday, broke its streak of losses to the Tarheels. The Carolinians have won over Maryland since 1921.

Virginia Polytechnic institute, which loomed as a favorite to defeat Washington and Lee, fumbled its way to the small end of the score, and the Generals won, 12 to 0.

Missippi A. and M., with a record of fights and victories, let Tennessee nose out a 7 to 3 victory at Memphis. The Aggies held Tennessee off for three periods and put over a field goal themselves in the third, but the Volunteers crossed the line with a touchdown in the closing stanza.

N. C. S. Loses Again.

North Carolina State dropped the second of its three conference battles, losing to Virginia Military institute, 22 to 7.

The Virginia cadets now lead these conference teams, with two or more games played. The Virginians have won two and lost one. Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, University of Alabama, Vanderbilt and Washington and Lee each has one conference victory and no losses. But Tech and Washington and Lee have tied games recorded. Florida and Kentucky also have ties, but have played no other conference games.

University of Mississippi, with two lost and no victories, is at the bottom of the conference standing. South Carolina, Virginia and Louisiana State have played but one game, and lost. Maryland, V. P. I., North Carolina, Tennessee and Mississippi A. and M. have won one and lost one, and North Carolina State has won one and lost one. Clemson and Auburn met in their first conference game and played a scoreless tie.

Alabama had an easy time defeating Spring Hill, 59 to 0, while Auburn took the soldiers from Fort Benning into camp with a 24 to 0 count. Virginia easily took the measure of Trinity, 33 to 0, while Florida had little trouble with Wake Forest, winning, 16 to 3. Sewanee came to Atlanta and won from Ogletborpe, 13 to 0, after a struggle that ended after the sun had gone down.

ATLANTA GIRL HOCKEY STAR

Lynchburg, Va., October 28.—(Special.)—Announcement has just been made at Randolph-Macon Woman's college of the girls who are put on the various hockey and basketball squads and this announcement includes several of the girls from Georgia.

Alberta Carson, a senior, of Savannah, has been placed on the hockey squad, while Martha Jarrell, of Atlanta, and Catherine Parnelle, of Savannah, have been assigned to the junior hockey squad. Catherine Banks, a junior, of Columbus, is on the basketball team of her class.

On the sophomore basketball team are Mildred Bennett, of Quitman, Ga.; Annie B. Daniel, of Augusta, Ga., and Margaret Maddox, of Atlanta, and Frances Demmond, of Savannah, has been placed on the hockey squad of the sophomore class. On the freshman basketball team are Rebecca Flournoy and Elizabeth Peabody, of Columbus, while Dorothy Debardeleben, of Atlanta, and Odessa Mulfred, of Columbus, are to play on the freshman hockey team.

Progress is being made in the tennis tournament, and Miss Katherine Banks, of Columbus, has won her way into the semi-finals and is looked upon by many as the probable winner of the championship.

METEORS COP BASKET GAME

The Meteor Feds defeated the R. O. T. C. basketball five 28 to 13 Sunday afternoon at the prison in a fast and interesting game.

The Feds have been playing for the past three weeks and are anxious to arrange games with teams around the city every Sunday afternoon.

The Feds started right after the R. O. T. C. team in the first minute of play and began a passing system that carried the ball directly under the goal many times where Sislin would ring the basket for two points.

Sislin and Courtney played nicely at forward, but the work of Morrelli at guard was the outstanding feature. He kept off many R. O. T. C. points by spectacular guarding. Garber and Gould played good ball for the losers but could do very little with the fast work of the Feds.

DUBOSE WINS BY KNOCKOUT

The Tech Boxing club held its first milling Saturday night in the Absco club rooms, over the Tudor theater, and some interesting boxing was given the large delegation of fans present.

The main bout of the initial card was featured by six fast rounds between Gibbs and Gilkerson, in which Gibbs was given the decision.

The match was very close and interesting, but Gibbs showed the best of the argument in aggressiveness.

DuBose knocked out Stebbins in the third round of the first fight, after two rounds of good fighting.

Keiserling and Haston fought four rounds to a draw in the second bout. Wilcox gave Epstein a knockout blow that stopped the third fight in the third round.

Gwyn was given a technical knockout over Kelly in the third round.

L'Hereaux and Wilson fought four rounds to a draw in the semi-windup, a good battle from the start.

The next fight card to be staged by the Tech Boxing club will be held Friday night, November 9, over the Tudor theater.

FEDS' OUTFIT WINS, 13 TO 7

BY M. D. GLEASON.

The federal prison football team won its second game of the series from the Fort McPherson team yesterday at Fort McPherson by the score of 13 to 7. The soldiers had the game 7 to 0 until the third quarter, as they were outplaying the Feds in every department.

But the Feds always fight hardest when they are behind, and with their backs to the wall they fought their way out and scored two touchdowns. The Feds used the Pittsburg Panther formation on several occasions and this move proved very much to their advantage. It gave their star fullback, Jack Miller, much work to do and Jack delivered the goods. He went over the line for all the Feds' points and kicked one goal after touchdown. The work of Miller, who, by the way, is one of the librarians at the prison, was the best seen at Fort McPherson this year.

The playing of Captain Rhinehart, Chuck Pollizzi, Gilmore, Gouppil, Belock, Miller and Riechall was good for the Feds.

The soldiers showed a marked improvement over last week. Two popular players on last year's team made their first appearance in the 1923 line-up — Goodsmith, fullback, and Joe Riska, right half. These men were the best ground gainers for the soldiers. Five minutes after Goldsmith entered the game in the second quarter he had the ball on the Feds' 3-yard line, through long end runs and line-bucking. Captain Hoover scored the touchdown.

Lieutenant Boettecher, who is also coach of the soldier team, played a great game for his club and worked hard for a victory. He made a drop-kick from the 38-yard line that went under the bar by less than six inches, the play being so close that most of those present thought he had made a field goal. The good playing of Cleveland, King and Dewey Smith was also very gratifying to their friends.

The day being ideal, from the spectators' standpoint, an unusually large crowd was present.

BOBBY JONES IN FINE FORM

Mamaroneck, N. Y., October 28.—Bobby Jones, American open golf champion, holed out a blind 60-foot approach shot for an eagle two in a benefit match which he and Jess Sweetser won from Walter Hagen and Gene Sqrazen Sunday afternoon.

Jones played brilliant golf in the afternoon round, retrieving the disadvantage under which he and his partner found themselves at the end of the morning round when they were five down.

Jones and Sweetser finished one up, thanks to Jones.

The proceeds of the match were given to a home for crippled children.

Darkness overtook the players late in the match and they could hardly play the last two holes.

CUE ARTISTS START MEET

New York, October 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—Six of the world's greatest billiardists tonight put on the finishing touches of their game in preparation for the 18.2 balk line championship, starting Monday night in Hotel Pennsylvania.

William F. Hoppe, holder of the title for more than a decade and Jacob Schaefer, Jr., son of the wizard whom Hoppe succeeded and the only man to defeat the present champion in a title tournament, are the best known of the six.

Schaefer won the title two years ago in a brilliant record-making engagement with Hoppe at Chicago, but lost it to Hoppe a year ago and was beaten in a challenge match last March with the title holder.

Walker Cochran, another leading American player, holder of many records; Rogers Conti, the youthful champion of France; Erich Hagenlacher, the German, and Edouard Horemans, champion of Belgium, are the others.

Hoppe and Schaefer have been playing steadily in exhibitions throughout the summer and if their matches were totalled they would have grand averages of better than sixty.

Shooting in Florida.

Thomasville, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—Thomasville sportsmen are looking forward eagerly to the opening of the hunting season next month, and especially to the duck shooting season. Lake Miccasukie, one of the big Florida lakes below here, where Thomasville hunters greatly resort, will probably not be as popular on the Jefferson county side, the lake being partly in Jefferson and partly in Leon counties. Jefferson has passed a law that ducks can be shot only on Mondays and Thursdays and nonresidents cannot shoot deer or turkeys in that county at all. There is no such law in Leon county, however, and the duck hunters will do their shooting chiefly on Lake Iamonia, which is entirely in Leon.

Yost's Thirty Years of Football

TELLS OF EARLY DEVELOPMENT

Possibilities in Forward Passes

BY FIELDING H. YOST
(Michigan's Famous Coach.)

The forward pass has done much in the so-called "new game" of football to increase the interest of the spectator and to draw forth all of the craftiness and strategy which makes the game so universally heralded as the one great American college sport.

Passes of some discription are as old as the game of football. In the very first days of the game, as in present day Rugby, the lateral passes and backward passes were used extensively. However, it was not until the old pass play was abridged in 1905 that the forward pass came into serious consideration.

It was during this year, 1905, that the forward pass was declared legitimate as a means of advancing the ball and the beginning of the season of 1906 is credited with the birth of the forward pass. This acceptance of the pass was due primarily to the requiring of 10 yards for downs, the stationing of 7 men on the forward wall and the abolishing of the pushing and pulling tactics, which called forth other than mass plays to make the required yardage.

The Spiral Pass.

There is each year much controversy on the originator or "discoverer" of the forward pass but watching it grow from infancy, and using it from the first, it is my opinion that many coaches, and not any single one, are responsible for the passing game of today. I remember distinctly when the spiral pass first came to my attention. During my first year as coach at Ohio Wesleyan university, 1897, I was faced with the task of developing punters. At this time the spiral punt was just coming into use and was practiced by very few punters. Not being able to punt efficiently myself, I dropped the ball on my hand to show how it should meet the foot and be caused to rotate and while doing this, found that the ball could be passed more accurately and with more speed in this manner. Needless to say, from then on I began teaching my men to pass spirals.

And I believe such was the case with many other coaches. By experimenting with their own teams they recognized the value of the pass, gave it attention, and developed it.

The forward pass came through many stages of development before reaching its present high plane. Shortly after it was inaugurated as a valuable and legitimate means of offense, the rules committee decided to block the field into 5 yard squares designated by chalk marks. A penalty was fixed which required the player, before passing the ball, to be five yards back and away from where the ball was put into play and the chalk marks aided the officials in judging this. The marks and rule were soon deemed too restricted, however, and the straight pass from formations, as of today's play, came into use. Since that time the rules have all been made with the idea of encouraging the forward pass.

Some Pass Too Much.

Even though the forward pass has been a part of offensive football for over 15 years, still there are few teams that have developed it into a consistent ground gaining attack, however, there are many teams that make the continued mistake of passing too much and thereby lose the real effect of the forward pass entirely.

The forward pass should be used continually as a threat, which is one of its strongest values, and should be mixed with a bucking and running attack to bring out the strategy and craftiness of the game. It should be used above all as a regular ground gaining play and not as a last desperate chance. Both long and short passes are valuable. Long passes, if completed, bring about many touchdowns while the short pass is equally valuable in that it puts the receiver in the open and it tends to disorganize and spread the defense which makes the running game easier.

Unquestionably, the forward pass has done much in increasing the popularity of football from the spectators' standpoint. We would like to think that the cleaner and increasingly high standards of sportsmanship in the new game of football is an indication of character and the realization of ethical values in sport. Such is doubtless the case, but at the same time no small part of this is due to the openness of the new game and therefore, to the forward pass.

Eddie Briney Will Battle Fearless Ferns Wednesday

Eddie Briney, tough lightweight of Louisville, yesterday agreed to fight Fearless Ferns, Atlanta favorite, 10 rounds in the semi-windup attraction of the Red Herring-Frankie Jones bout to be staged Wednesday night at the Auditorium under the auspices of the 108th cavalry.

In securing Briney to fight Ferns the 108th cavalry has taken another step in making the bout one of the best ever held at the Auditorium. Fans who saw Red Herring defeat K. O. Jeakle last Tuesday night will readily believe Herring is ready to figure in another splendid entertainment. He meets something tough in Jones. Jones, a Californian, is reputed as having quite a nice record himself, having fought all the good boys.

The card will include "Irish Benny" Pledger vs. Chief Otalvaro in six rounds; Battling Petrozio vs. Jackie Carr, 8 rounds; Fearless Ferns vs. Eddie Brinley, 10 rounds, and Red Herring vs. Frankie Jones in a 10-round main bout.

"Irish Benny" has fought in Atlanta several times and his fighting qualities are well known to local fight fans. Chief Otalvaro will be remembered as the Indian lad from Columbus, who gave Battling Barnett a good battle several weeks ago in the auditorium fight arena. Petrozio and Carr are local products and are anxious to settle another argument in the ring.

There is little need to worry over the fighting qualities of Ferns, for he has clearly demonstrated several times that he can go in and fight with the best of them. Reports from Louisville have it that Briney will be no set up for the Atlantan.

The main fight will be one well worth the price of admission. The match makers of the 108th Calvary have been searching for some time to find a fighter capable of interesting Herring. They have found one that will give the fans plenty of action.

The card will be fast, full of action, with plenty of good punching from every lad entered on the card.

Tickets will go on sale today at Chess' place, on Edgewood ave. The Rex, North Pryor street, and Oppenheimer's on Peachtree street.

FIELD GOAL WINS FOR JEFFERSON COLLEGE, 9-7

New Orleans, La., October 28.—Kicking a field goal from the 40-yard line in the last minute of play Jefferson college defeated Loyola university freshmen at Loyola stadium today by a score of 9 to 6.

Although outweighed by their opponents Loyola outplayed Jefferson in the first quarter and by punts and forward passes scored a touchdown but failed to kick goal.

Neither team was able to tally in the second period but in third Jefferson came back and scored a touchdown, but failed to add the one point.

Just as the whistle blew in the final quarter Livar, of Jefferson, added the three points by sending the pigskin sailing through the goal posts from the 40-yard line.

CHICAGO BIKE RACES START

Chicago, October 28.—Fifteen teams, comprising the strongest field that has ever appeared here, sped away tonight at 9 o'clock at the Coliseum in the start of the eighth international six-day bicycle race, which will end at 11 o'clock next Saturday night after 146 hours of riding.

The beginning of the race marked the inauguration of "sleepless nights" for thousands of dyed-in-the-wool bike fans, who sit hour after hour patiently watching the whirling riders circling the track, always with the hope that "somebody will start something."

U. S. SKATERS ARE PICKED

Cleveland, Ohio, October 28.—Skaters who will represent America at the Olympic games at Chamoix, in the French Alps, next February, were selected by the International Skating Union of America, at the closing session of its seventeenth annual convention here today.

These selections will be forwarded to the American Olympic executive committee for approval.

The speed skaters selected are Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid, international outdoor champion; Harry Kaskey, Chicago, national and Canadian outdoor champion; Joe Moore, New York, international indoor champion in 1922 and runner-up this year, and William Steinmetz, Chicago, last year's international outdoor titleholder.

The team recommended by the United States Figure Skating association to represent the figure skaters was approved. It includes Mrs. Charles B. Blanchard, American womens' champion; Miss Beatrice Loughran, runner-up; Sherwin Badger, men's champion, and Nat Niles, paired with Mrs. Blanchard in the doubles championship.

The Boston A. A. team will form the nucleus of the team which will represent the hockey skaters. Where it needs strengthening players will be replaced by players from other teams in the United States Amateur Hockey league.

RICKEY NOT TO SELL HORNSBY, HE SAYS

St. Louis, Mo., October 28.—Manager Branch Rickey, of the St. Louis Nationals, today termed the report that Rogers Hornsby would be traded to the Chicago Cubs for four players a "grand insult."

He related a recent conversation with Bill Killefer, manager of the Cubs, in which an offer was made for Hornsby and promptly rejected.

Mrs. Lowndes To Lead Off, Paired With Mrs. Robinson; Low Scores Are Expected

Illness Will Prevent Miss Rosalie Mayer, One Of the Favorites, From Competing In Battle for Title.

Mrs. Dozier Lowndes, present champion and former southern champion, will open the women's fourth annual city golf championship tournament at the East Lake Country club when she tees off at 9:00 o'clock this morning in the qualifying round with Mrs. L. J. Robinson, former Michigan state title holder.

Both players are at top form and it will be a toss-up as to which one will turn in the low medal score.

The weather man has promised ideal weather for the tournament and it is predicted that a new medal score for women at East Lake is likely to be hung up.

Owing to an attack of lagrippe Miss Rosalie Mayer will be unable to play in this tournament and the dope now favors Mrs. Dozier Lowndes, Mrs. T. T. Williams, Mrs. L. H. Beck, and Mrs. L. J. Robinson for the city crown.

The committee requests that the qualifying rounds be played this morning if possible, the contestants to arrange their own pairings for the round.

The tees to be played from will be marked with flags. Stymies will be played during this tournament, as this is a championship affair. Summer rules will be observed.

In addition to the handsome trophies for the winners and runners-up of each flight, there will be a handsome trophy for the low medalist.

This tournament is being arranged by the Atlanta Woman's Golf association, but it is not necessary to be a member of the association or any private club in order to compete. It is open to any one living in Atlanta. The only requirements is the $2 entrance fee, which may be paid at the first tee. As there have been no pairings arranged by the committee, those arriving first may tee off as they wish.

The pairings and starting time for the first day of match play that will get under way tomorrow morning will be arranged as soon as all qualifying scores are turned in this afternoon.

The Constitution will carry the correct pairings and starting times during the tournament.

MUCH MATERIAL LOOMING FOR BIG RACE

Cincinnati, October 28.—Horsemen and the racing public give Colonel M. J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey club, credit for capturing the turf prize of the year when he matched Zev and My Own in the Latonia championship, to be run at Latonia next Saturday, November 3.

Colonel Winn, in commenting on the race, said: "The meeting of Zev and My Own will be the sensational turf contest of the year."

The race run yesterday by Carl Weidemann's In Memoriam, was a good exhibition, and should put that horse in condition for the championship.

The victory of Rialto at Laurel also gives the Greentree stable candidate a chance, and it was believed likely that he would be shipped here for the big race.

Help To Make Dixie Best Place To Live, Negroes Are Urged

Rev. M. Roberts, who will be elected one of the delegates from the Atlanta conference to the general conference of the A. M. E. church, which meets in Louisville, Ky., in May, delivered a very interesting sermon in Mt. Carmel A. M. E. church Sunday morning.

He urged the colored people to help make the south the best place to live in. A race of people, that expects something for nothing, and promotion without sacrifice, will not gain the confidence of the citizens in the community, he said.

Rootstocks of the coptis, a plant native of northern Europe, Siberia, Iceland and North America, contains a yellow dye.

"Blossom Time."

(At the Atlanta Theater Tonight.)

Small is the wonder that the three-act musical play, "Blossom Time," based upon romantic incidents in the life of the famous composer, Franz Schubert, is still the reigning sensation of European capitals, where it has played with tremendous success ever since early in the outbreak of the world war. Never since the early days of the triumphs of Maude Adams have audiences been showering the play and players of "Blossom Time" with such praise. Tonight it begins an engagement at the Atlanta theater of one week, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, and is one of the attractions that no one should miss. "Blossom Time" abounds in comedy, its music is of the true haunting Viennese school that has been popular here in the past, and most of the melodies were composed by Franz Scaubert himself. "Blossom Time" has filled a long-felt want on our theatrical menu. It is the gem of the light opera stage and the greatest musical success produced in a decade. Real voices are required to sing the beautiful score, so the role of Schubert has been entrusted to Greek Evans. Margaret Merle, known as the Tetrazzini of vaudeville, is the Mitzi. Crowded houses should prevail throughout the engagement and those desiring choice seats should secure them without delay.

"The Man Who Came Back."

(At the Lyric.)

Man's struggle to save himself from the perils of great wealth on the one hand and from poverty on the other, and a woman's effort to help him realize his own soul constitute the dramatic theme of "The Man Who Came Back," the William A. Brady production which established a record of 500 successive nights on Broadway. The Forsyth players have secured the play for this week at the Lyric theater and have spared no money and no pains to make its production here equal the original one in New York. Miss Clara Joel will appear for the last time this week as the leading woman of the players and is cast in one of the best parts she has ever had in Atlanta. A background of clean comedy is maintained for the serious central theme of the story. Part of the action occurs in the Hawaiian islands and splendorous settings are provided. "The Man Who Came Back" will be seen here each night this week and at matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At Forsyth.)

Today ushers in springtime at the Forsyth theater. Or, that's the way it is billed anyway, for the "Springtime Revue," with Mlle. Mimi and Pomme and eight dancing beauties, formerly of the New York hippodrome, come to headline a bill of five splendid acts of Keith vaudeville for the first three days of this week.

Then there is the act of Rolland and Ray, in a comedy episode, called "By Appointment." The playlet is by the author of "Six-Cylinder Love," which should mean a whole lot to devotees of the drama.

Other acts on the bill for the first of the week include that of Laura Ormsbee and Jack Neal, in "Moments of Melody;" Hubert Dyer and Ben Coyne, flying ring artists, and Worth, Willing and Gessner, blackface comedians.

Loew's Vaudeville.

(At Grand.)

Stella Mahew, famous musical comedy comedienne, and "The Georgian Frolics of 1923" will be headliners at Loew's Grand theater this week on a big double bill which will include "Broadway Gold" as the feature picture production.

Miss Mahew is known on two continents as one of America's foremost entertainers. Her work is well known in Atlanta, where she used to appear regularly in big musical comedies. She will bring all her old favorite songs and will also sing "Comfort," her latest comedy hit.

This year's edition of "The Frolics" is expected to be at least 100 per cent better than the show offered last year which scored such a pronounced hit.

"The Frolics" will be offered in connection with the regular Loew vaudeville bill, which will be headed by Miss Mahew and will include other Loew acts.

FOUR CAR CRASHES REPORTED SUNDAY

Victims Are Not Seriously Injured—Auto Is Demolished When Struck by Switch Engine.

Four automobile accidents in which several persons were injured, none of them seriously, and a street car accident in which a woman and her 3-year-old daughter were knocked down, both suffering minor bruises, were reported to police Sunday night.

W. E. Gossett, of 637 Chestnut street, and Miss Catherine Bates, of 85 Marietta street, were taken to Davis-Fischer sanitarium shortly before midnight from injuries suffered when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a switch engine at the Ashby street crossing of the A., B. & A. railway.

Auto Is Demolished.

Miss Bates' injuries consisted of bruises about the head and body while her companion escaped with only a severe shakeup. The automobile was demolished. Officers Davis and Jeffers, who investigated the accident, were informed by witnesses that the engineer of the switch engine failed to signal a warning for the crossing.

Mrs. H. Adams and her daughter, Evelyn, were victims of the street car accident which occurred at the corner of East Hunter and King streets. The two were crossing the street and failed to see the street car, police were told, until it knocked them to the pavement. The child suffered bruises about the head, but was otherwise unhurt. She was taken to Grady hospital, where her injuries were attended. The mother was only slightly bruised.

J. A. Ballard suffered a deep cut on his forehead when the automobile he was driving collided with the machine of Earl Bailey, of 16 Clayton street, at the corner of Spring and Walton streets. Ballard declined to go to a hospital with his injury. Both drivers told police the collision was unavoidable and no cases were docketed.

Reckless Driving Charged.

Cases of reckless driving were made against N. R. Johnson and M. M. Samel, of 252 Ormond street, whose automobiles collided at Rawson and Pryor streets. Neither of the men was injured, but both machines were damaged.

J. H. Morrow, of 26 Harold street, was arrested following a collision of a truck he was driving with a touring car driven by C. H. Cosley, of 148 Kirkwood avenue, the smashup occurring at Metropolitan avenue and Flatshoals road. Both machines were damaged, but neither of the drivers was injured. Morrow was released upon furnishing bond of $100. No case was made against Cosley.

Caldwell, and incidentally to look over the work of the Madison county health unit which is declared to be making an unusual record for efficiency, it being reflected in the monthly death rate which is now near the minimum.

Needs of Helpless Shown Community Chest Leaders On Sunday Inspection Trip

Tiny little 8-weeks-old David lay in his crib at the Georgia Children's home Sunday morning and looked up with the wide-open eyes of helpless babyhood into the faces of strange men who towered around him, and the expressions of these men, the executive committeemen of the community chest, softened as they gazed down upon the appealing little human who was picked up almost eight weeks ago beside a road not far from Decatur.

"We did not begin to realize the scope of the community chest until we started these visits to the member agencies," said Eugene R. Black, general chairman. "There is only one thing that could do us all more good: If we could bring everybody in Atlanta along with us, and let them see what we are seeing, there would be no need for a campaign for funds. Atlanta just wants to know what is being done the Atlanta will back it up with generous hands."

Whole Range of Emotion.

Sunday's tour of inspection, the second the committee has made, took the leaders of the chest once more through the whole range of human emotions and human needs.

Render Fuller, now a grown but supposedly helpless man, at the home for incurables, illustrated the spirit of the morning. Atlanta remembers when Render Fuller was found, a helpless abandoned infant, almost famished, a prey of insects, in the woods near the city. Atlanta's charities were no organized then as they are now. The best that could be done for Render was to send him first to one hospital, and later to become a ward of the city at Grady hospital. He spent his babyhood at the latter institution, and for the past 19 years has been in the home for incurables. But Render Fuller, helpless in a rolling chair, without the use of any member of his body, was smiling Sunday morning as he smiles always. The committeemen found him on a porch of the home, reading his bible. He turns the leaves with his lip. His typewriter, which he operates with a stick held between his teeth, stood inside on a table beside his bed.

Little David, at the Georgia Children's home, might have been crippled like Render Fuller, if someone had not found him in time.

Thirty-nine other guests of public benevolence were found in the home for incurables at 220 South Boulevard. One of these was a young woman, who has been totally blind for eight years. Another was an aged old lady, who recently celebrated her ninety-fourth birthday, and who, from her bed, demanded sharply to know what it was all about. And there were the others, most of them cheerful, some sunk in apathy, but all helpless and incurable.

Florence Crittenton Home.

Four member agencies that care for children were visited in the course of the morning, and one that cares for mothers and their babies. The Florence Crittenton home, just referred to, was visited first. This is the only institution in Atlanta that is operating under a charter from the United States congress. Established in 1886, just where it still is standing today, this institution in 37 years has cared for thousands of young women at a critical time in their lives. It has helped them through the most trying experience that comes to womanhood, under circumstances just the opposite of those that usually glorify it. And it has continued to care for them and their babies until they could readiust their lives.

The four agencies caring exclusively for children, visited Sunday by the committee, are the Atlanta Child's home, the Georgia Children's Home society, the Leonard Street orphanage and the Carrie Steele Logan Home for Children. These, with the Home for Incurables and the Florence Crittenton home, made up the committee's program for the day.

All, save the smallest children, had not yet returned from Sunday school in town when the committee arrived at the Atlanta Child's home; but the infants were there in their cribs, and the intermediate sizes were in their playroom, and the older ones came in before the committee left. Altogether, 54 children are in this home. Several mothers are there, helping with all the children in return for the privilege of finding shelter and care in the company of their own.

Negro Children Aided.

In the Leonard Street Orphans' home the committee found the realization of the dream of one woman and the result of her life work. Miss Anie Chadwick, an Englishwoman, began this task 21 years ago in the spirit of a missionary. Starting with nothing but old barracks that had been abandoned by the army, she has built an institution which, for cheerfulness and cleanliness and thoroughness of its good work, is not surpassed in Atlanta. Girls only are cared for by this institution for colored people.

Miss Chadwick told the committee she has now about 60 little girls in the home, 40 of whom have no relatives in the world. All the work of the home is done by the girls. They even make their own clothes. All go to Spellman seminary in the primary grades and a number have graduated from there as nurses and teachers and social welfare workers among their own people.

Strong contrast with the Leonard street orphanage was furnished, in the eyes of the committee, by the Carrie Steele Logan home, away out on East Fair street. This is another institution founded by a woman, Carrie Steele, remembered by older Atlantans as a colored woman with faith and vision and determination. But she died a number of years ago, and the work she started has been carried on by the colored people without help or counsel from outside. Fifty-one little negro boys and girls, waifs from everywhere and nowhere, sent in by the police, the juvenile court and other agencies, were found in the home Sunday morning. With what it has, the home does a good work and a needed work, the committee were agreed; but they were agreed also that here is an institution that needs sympathetic help from the best resources at the city's command.

Sixteen infants and 29 older children were found by the committee in the Georgia Children's home at Ormewood court, which is a handsome and commodious building, formerly the residence of an Atlanta citizen located on a commanding hill and in a grove of big trees. But the number indicated little, for children are passing through this agency constantly. It is the official adoption agency recognized by the state, working under state requirements as to the placing of children and their supervision afterward until legal adoption is permitted. The home at Ormewood is the Atlanta receiving station of the society itself, which is statewide in its interest.

"If Atlanta could see these things with us," they said.

Splendid Concert Series Will Open Tuesday Night

"Musical Atlanta has utterly failed to realize the great opportunity being offered in the series of concerts to be presented this year by the Atlanta Music club," declared a prominent music lover of the city Sunday in discussing the sale of seats up to the present time.

"In New York our city is recognized as the foremost musical center of the south. Can we justly claim this distinction? Do we deserve it? While experts the country over pay deserved tribute to the artists who will be presented here, the Atlanta public is sleeping over an opportunity to enjoy a series of unsurpassed concerts."

This course includes Rosa Raisa, Padewski, Salvi, Graveure, Morini, Friederman, Flonzaley Quartette and Ukrainian chorus.

The opening concert, which takes place on Tuesday night at the auditorium, is that of Rosa Raisa, one of the most brilliant figures before the musical public today, and perhaps the foremost living dramatic soprano of the Italian school. As leading soprano of the Chicago Opera company her advancement has been phenomenal.

In New York and other musical centers her artistic attainments are fully recognized. Since her success in New York in the season of 1921 she has been one of the most sought-after singers in the musical field.

A resident of Atlanta who attended the Raisa concert in a near-by city in 1921 recalls that occasion as a tremendous musical success. In temperament and artistic attainment her triumph was outstanding. She sang to a capacity house, and at the completion of her program she was recalled again and again by the enthusiastic audience.

The sale of tickets for the past two days would indicate that Atlanta is not aroused to the fact that this opening concert is one of the biggest features of the entire course.

Many colleges in near-by towns have bought blocks of seats, showing that out-of-town schools and colleges are more appreciative of the educational advantages of these concerts than are local institutions.

Plan Club and Links.

Huntsville, Ala., October 28.—(Special.)—An option has been taken on a handsome country estate near Huntsville for the establishment of a country club and golf links. Civic clubs and the chamber of commerce have taken the initiative, and expect to put over the proposition without a hitch within the next few days. A golf link course of 80 acres is provided and the club house is one of the finest country homes in the state, it is declared. The location has not yet been disclosed.

Sloan Made Liquidator.

Huntsville, Ala., October 28.—(Special.)—John Sloan, who has been with the Bank of Madison for some time representing the War Finance corporation and the Chattanooga banks, has been appointed liquidating officer for the bank, which was closed last Tuesday by order of the state banking board because of an apparent overextension of its credits. Sloan is expected to begin winding up the affairs of the institution at once. It is now believed that the depositors will receive 100 per cent on the dollar.

Ruppert's Faith Rewarded When Yankees Won Series

The Colonel Refused to Fire Miller Huggins When Fans Were "On" the Manager.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Passing by Babe Ruth, Long Bob Meusel and other player-heroes of the series in which the Yanks took the world pennant away from Coogan's Bluff to hang it over the great new Yankee stadium across the river, we come to a small, quiet person who did more than anyone else to get the rag for Col. Jake's team.

Only a year ago Yankee fans raged and demanded that Ruppert get a new manager in place of Miller Huggins. The luck of baseball had run hard against Huggins. He had fought through the season with a team that looked a sure winner against the Giants, but at the crucial moment it blew up. Everybody panned and roasted Huggins. He didn't seem to have a friend on earth.

But Jake Ruppert stopped all rumors of a new Yankee manager by saying that he had absolute confidence in Miller Huggins, that he believed Huggins would turn out another league championship team and beat the best in the National league in another year. When Col. Jake continued to string with Huggins all criticism fell flat. Huggins made good by winning the American league pennant for the third time in succession, and by beating the Giants after twice coming from behind, scoring four games to two, taking the last three in a row.

Miller Huggins is an unusual type among baseball managers. He is so retiring that he usually slips away after a winning game and goes into hiding, dodging all congratulations and interviews. But although he doesn't advertise himself he knows baseball for changes in his team, but events players. He has often been criticized have shown that he was right. It was Miller Huggins, for one thing, who brought Babe Ruth out of his last year's slump, convinced Ruth that hard training and strict attention to ball playing would bring him back, and made Ruth one of the greatest all around players the game has ever seen.

Huggins is likely to make good again next year. He says "The Giants are one up on us and I hope to even it." That's a whole encyclopedia, coming from Huggins.

The world's series umps found out that they aren't bigger than the players, when they asked Landis for more money during the series. The only time anyone notices an umpire is when he makes a mistake. An ump's good work is just a matter of course.

MONS CRIQUI'S COMING BACK.

Eugene Criqui intends to come back to America and challenge Johnny Dundee to give him a return match for the featherweight title.

Criqui is a hard-luck boxer. He came here and knocked out Johnny Kilbane. He might have gone back to France as a world's champion, and no doubt could have gone along there for years knocking out English and French boxers and regarded in France as the greatest featherweight of the age. Fame and fortune waited for him, but he stopped here long enough to give Dundee a fight, and in Dundee's galloping style he met something so entirely new that he didn't know how to fight. Criqui was knocked out by a boxer who never has been a knocker-out and who never has shown a knockout punch before. It almost seems a fluke of fortune that gave Dundee the title, especially after the poor fight he put up next time when he was easily trimmed by a Phalidelphia lightweight of only moderate reputation.

If Criqui's fights Dundee again he will have a very fair chance to win back the championship. His defeat by Dundee was only one lost fight after a long list of wins with clean knockouts. Any fighter can have an off-night.

Carpentier and Tom Gibbons—the natural match. Gibbons is fast and clever and a good hitter, but, at best only a topnotch lightweight. The same description fits Carpentier.

Gibbons is a much better fighter than McTigue, holder of the light-heavyweight title. A Carpentier-McTigue fight would probably be a gift to Carpentier. It would be better to put McTigue against Gibbons and Carpentier against the winner.

Harry Greb, middleweight champion, wants to fight Carpentier. He would have a very good chance to beat the Frenchman. But if Greb fights any more title battles the referee should read up on the boxing rules and go in prepared to enforce them. Holding your man around the neck with the left hand while you sock him with the right isn't good form, according to the Marquis of Queensberry. Greb might not know how to fight if the rules against holding and hitting were enforced. The same goes for Harry Wills, who is a more persistent hold-and-hit artist than Greb.

THE BOAT-BUILDING SMITHS.

There is a rumor that Chris Smith, of Algonac, famous builder of all America's record-breaking motor boats since 1914, is planning a "100-mile boat"—that is, a boat that can run at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

It isn't possible. When Chris Smith began building fast boats the world's speed boat record was less than 50 miles an hour. Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of the Atlantic Yacht club, was the first to drive a hydroplane at a sustained speed of more than 50 miles an hour when he broke the record in the first heat of the gold challenge cup race on Lake George in 1914 with Baby Reliance V. Since that time Chris Smith has built boats that have held a sustained speed of 80 miles an hour. 30 miles faster. Some improvements in design or in power plant may enable him to add 20 miles to that. If not, his sons may do it. They are the fourth generation of boat-building Smiths at Algonac.

IN GATES THERE AIN'T NO STING.

Gate money at the recent world series was over a million dollars, or $1,063,815 to be exact.

Players' share, $362,783, divided between players of both clubs.

The gate at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Jersey City was approximately $1,623,000. Share of the two fighters, $500,000.

Gate at the Firpo-Dempsey fight was $1,185,000. Fighters' share, $600,000, divided between the two men.

At that Jack Kearns tells me Rickard groaned when he made out a check for Dempsey's end in the Firpo fight.

Additions to Cotton Mills Will Double Summerville Output

Summerville, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—A large addition will practically double the output of the Summerville Cotton Mills, of this place, one of the largest manufacturers of cotton ducks in northwest Georgia. Contract for the new machinery will be made within a few days. The addition was voted at a recent meeting of stockholders.

In addition to the enlargement of the mill, a large number of new cottages for the operatives will be built. Work on these has already started.

This mill now uses between 1,200 and 1,500 bales of cotton per month and the enlarged plant will consume almost double that amount, it is said. This necessarily will bring many new people to Summerville and will increase the pay roll of the mill.

Colonel John D. Taylor, who has been president of the mill since its organization, nearly 20 years ago, has been reelected for another year as has E. Montgomery, who has been superintendent for the same length of time.

The Summerville Cotton Mill is situated just beyond the southern city limits of Summerville and is an ideal mill village, having water and sewerage systems and electric lights, as well as good streets and sidewalks. It furnishes lights and electric power for the entire city of Summerville, as well as the mill village.

A five-year closed period on all fur-bearing animals in British Columbia probably will be approved by the provincial game conservation board shortly, to give the fur industry an opportunity to recover from the present depletion of these animals, according to an announcement made by the chairman of the board.

Tens of thousands of caribou are trekking southward for the winter. Bands of them have passed through the outskirts of Dawson City and hunters have got a plentiful supply. For a hundred miles down, bands of caribou can be seen swimming the Yukon river, and sometimes surrounding canoes and steamboats as they pass. . . .

First official issue of United States stamps was made in 1842, they bore a portrait of Washington, and were of the value of three cents.

New Orleans Cotton Reaches New High Price for Season

New Orleans, October 28.—The price of cotton last week was sent to new high levels for the season, new high records, being made repeatedly up to Friday when the December position traded at 30.52 cents a pound. At this stage the active months in the contract market were 112 to 132 points over last sales of the preceding week. On the close prices were 78 to 103 points net higher on the week, December closing at 30.23. In the spot department prices gained 62 points on middling, which closed at 30.50 cents a pound against 23.25 on the close of this week last year.

There were two important factors working for higher prices, the lower range of crop ideas resulting from much unfavorable weather in the belt, more particularly in the extreme western sections and signs of improving trade in the large textile markets of the world. Markets on this side of the water were startled, soon after the middle of the week, by cables saying that one firm, doing a large business in the Far East, had bought a million pieces of cloth in the Manchester market. At the end of the week, New York telegrams received here claimed that some Worth street firms had been doing the largest business in their history and that one firm alone put through transactions amounting to more than ten million yards of goods on one day toward the end of the week.

Private crop estimates ranging from 9,816,000 bales to 10,300,000 while on the closing session as estimate of 9,566,000 bales appeared and was seriously considered by the trade. The question of the size of the crop will be brought into greater prominence this coming week by the condition and indicated crop figures due from the department of agriculture. They will carry the crop down to October 25 and will be issued Friday. Thursday will be a holiday in this market. The end of the week seems likely to be almost wholly dominater by the bureau report.

Bond Prices Show Gains; Foreign Issues Decline

New York, October 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—Improved bond prices were recorded for the general list during the past week with the single exception of foreign government issues, which were depressed. Gains predominated in both the railroad and domestic industrial groups and all of the active United States government securities moved higher.

New offerings for the week totaled $73,404,000 as compared with $99,064,000 the previous week. The bulk of the new financing last week was by public utility corporations. All the issues met with ready sale and traders reported that orders for investment bonds continued to come into the market in moderate volume.

Buying of the Liberty issues was understood to have come largely from operations of the government sinking fund and for the account of the British government. The tax exempt 3 1-2s crossed par for the first time in several months.

European bonds were sold rather freely throughout the week, the favorable developments at the week-end exerting little, if any, influence on them. Mexican bonds also moved down sharply on news dispatches chronicling financial difficulties in Mexico. They improved somewhat later on reassuring statements by both the Mexican government and the international committee of bankers on Mexico, but closing prices were off somewhat on the week.

A feature of the trading in railroad securities was an unusual demand for 4 per cent mortgages said to have come from Holland, where the older railroad issues also are listed. Wire houses reported also a considerable improvement in buying orders from the west for railroad bonds, public utility liens and some of the industrial mortgages. Practically all of the St. Paul mortgages touched new low prices during the week, as did also some of the Missouri Pacific bonds. The only reason traders were able to assign for the selling of those bonds was speculative fear that freight rate reductions are impending which would make it difficult for the roads to meet fixed charges.

Important new offerings were: $12,500,000, thirty-three-year 5 per cent first mortgage bonds of the Pere Marquette railway at 93 3-4 to yield 5.40 per cent; $11,500,000 twenty-year 6 per cent refunding bonds of the Southern California Edison company at 98 1-2 to yield 6.12 per cent; $15,000,000 twenty-year 6 1-2 per cent convertible debenture bonds of the International Match corporation at 94 1-2 to yield 7 per cent; $10,000,000 six-month 4 1-2 per cent notes of the Federal Intermediate Credit banks at par; and $10,000,000 thirty-year 5 1-2 per cent first lien and refunding bonds of the Philadelphia Electric company at 98 1-2 to yield 5.60 per cent.

Foreman Heads Big Department In Chest Drive

One of the big divisions of the community chest campaign is known as the individual subscribers' division. R. L. Foreman is chairman of the committee in charge of this department and Thomas H. Daniel and R. K. Rambo are serving with Mr. Foreman. This committee will reach about 20,000 Atlantans.

It will be organized in four subdivisions, each covering a section of the city. These four generals have just been named. They are Julian V. Boehm, of the Civitans; Charles L. C. Thomas, of the Rotary; Roy S. Mather, of the Lions' club, and J. R. Bachman, of the Kiwanis.

Mr. Mather is president of the Lions' club, and is a member of the firm of Mather Brothers, furniture dealers, at 44 South Forsyth street. He will be in charge of division "B," which is the northeast section of Atlanta.

Mr. Boehm was elected chairman of the intercivic council several days ago. He is past president of the Atlanta Civitan club, is international trustee of the International Association of Civitans clubs, and is special agents of the Union Central Life Insurance company.

Charles L. C. Thomas is in charge of division "C," which covers the southeast portion of Atlanta. Mr. Thomas is first vice president of the Rotary club; vice president of the international corporation and is owner of C. L. C. Thomas warehouse, on Milton avenue.

Mr. Bachman is to be in charge of division "D," which covers the southwest portion of Atlanta. He is secretary and sales manager of the Atlanta Milling company; alderman from the twelfth ward and a member of the Kiwanis club.

Stately March Features Howard Concert Sunday

BY RALPH T. JONES.

When Sir Edward Elgar decided to write a suitable march, to be played at the coronation of King Edward VII of England, he wrote "Pomp and Circumstance."

When the Atlanta Symphony orchestra played that march Sunday afternoon, every listener in the audience which packed the Howard theater, understood just how well that composition fitted the occasion, when a mighty monarch went to receive the crown. Perhaps it is necessary to the proper thrill of this music, in all its stately majesty, that you be of British birth. Whether you are or not, however, you can feel your pulses lift to the steady cadence of its measures, to the imperial pride of its movement.

Every Instrument Used.

As this triumphant music swells towards its tremendous climax, every instrument in the great orchestra is pressed into service. The great pipe organ leads the sweep of the violins, the throbbing strings of the harp accentuate the blare of the powerful basses, and throbbing in mighty tread through all, come the beats of the drums and cymbals. Then, like a rushing storm calling to glorious sacrifice, is the rumble of the snare drums working on your martial emotions like the beat of the tom-tom calls the savage to battle.

This march was the crashing climax of a program that probably brought greater enjoyment to the great majority of the audience than any one of the three preceding programs this new orchestra has given. Not, perhaps, because it was better rendered; not, certainly, because the music chosen was any greater or finer, but simply and solely because the program had been selected with the sole view of popularity. And, when all is said and done, if you would please the vast majority you must give exactly what the vast majority knows it likes. The average man may enjoy to the full something new, something he has never heard before; it may benefit his musical education and lead to a higher culture in the art; but if you want to win his unstinted approval give him something he has known and loved all his life. Then he'll rise up and cheer for you.

Favorite Music.

This old favorite music was exactly what Conductor Endico Leide and his fifty musicians gave Atlanta Sunday afternoon. They opened the program with Mendelssohn's overture to the "Midsummer Night's Dream." This, with all its fantastic, fanciful, fairylike effects, brought unconscious smiles of happiness to faces usually austere, brought grins of delight to the children present and brought utter forgetfulness of the crass materialism of life to us all.

Next was the "Carmen" suite, by Bizet. Everybody knows nearly all of this. The "Toreadores," "Habanera," "Guard Mount," and "Gypsy Dance" are perhaps the best known, but all are old and well-tried favorites. Though there are eight numbers in the suite, Atlanta persisted in breaking in between each one with an outburst of applause which simply couldn't wait, until the orthodox end of the suite, to be heard. This little habit, which is noted every Sunday at these concerts, while not quite in accordance with strict etiquette for such occasions, nevertheless is evidence of the real enjoyment Atlantans are taking in their orchestra and therefore can well be overlooked.

Opening the second half of the program, Conductor Leide gave a short talk on the various instruments in the orchestra. He explained the part each played in producing the effects of the whole, and as each instrument was named, its player sounded a few bars, to illustrate the description of Mr. Leide.

"Peer Gynt."

Then came that ever wonderful "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg. Possibly there is no musical composition which is so universally played and on every kind of instrument. Certainly there is none more effective. The orchestra on Sunday played four of the five movements, "Morning," Asa's Death," "Anitra's Dance" and the "Dance of the Gnomes," or "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

And in conclusion, the Elgar march, "Pomp and Circumstance."

For next week we are promised another program on a parity of interest with all that have gone before. It is as follows:

1. Overture, "Euryanthe," Weber.
2. Symphony No. 5, Tschaikowsky (second and fourth movements).
3. Valse Triste, Sibelius.
4. Rout d'Omphale, Saint-Saens.
5. Overture, "Rienzi," Wagner.

Business Reports Established Three-Year Sales Record

Washington, October 28.—Reports to the federal reserve board covering business conditions during the last six weeks show that wholesale trade was the largest in three years, that retail trade increased nine per cent over a year ago although the seasonal increase over summer business was smaller than usual, and that production of basic commodities declined. Employment was maintained at the high level of several months.

While a review by the board, made public today, showed a decline of five per cent from the peak reached in May, some commodities including cement and sugar meltings, were produced in larger quantities than in the months immediately preceding.

There was also an increase in contract awards for business and industrial buildings. Due to the decrease in contracts for residences, new building construction as a whole, however, showed a reduction as compared with preceding months. A substantial reduction in the production of iron and steel also was revealed.

Distribution of all classes of commodities by the railroads continued at a high rate in September and early October. The board found that retail stocks were thirteen per cent larger at the end of September than on the same date a year ago.

The board's summary of price changes disclosed that wholesale fuel quotations declined in September for the eighth successive month, and building materials and metals were also lower. Wholesale prices, at large, however, showed an increase of 2 per cent, particularly noticed in clothing, food and farm products.

Prices of certain farm products continued to increase in the first three weeks of October, the board reports, adding that wheat and cotton quotations reached the highest point in the current year. Prices of hogs, however, showed a decline.

The annual seasonal increase in bank credit began early in September and resulted, according to reserve board records, in increasing the loans by member banks in the leading cities by $16,000,000 between September 12 and October 10. This increase, the board says, reflected chiefly the renewed demand for commercial loans which reached a new high record for the year on October 12.

Money rates, however, showed an easier tendency and after September 15, commercial paper rates declined an average of about one fourth of one per cent.

We have made arrangements to build new six-room bungalows in Glendale Terrace and sell at $8,250 with $750 cash down. We have four distinct bungalow plans, consisting of a cream brick, a red tapestry brick and English and a buff brick, all with different floor plans. These four designs combine all the latest features found in model city homes and the exterior is very attractive. We have arranged to sell these houses so that payments will not exceed the average rental paid for apartments, thus enabling purchasers to make payments on a home instead of collecting rent receipts. Call and let our salesmen show you these plans.
